If you're running Windows 95 shut down your machine and then re-start in DOS mode.
Change to your floppy drive and run PCZONE.BAT. Once the game has unzipped to the chosen directory run SETSOUND.EXE to set up your sound card and run FD.BAT to play the game. For best results plug in your joystick and calibrate it before starting the demo mission.

101 Duke Nukem 3D levels (Various third parties)

Plop the disk into your floppy drive and type czone>. This sexy little batch file will then unpack all the levels into your specified Duke directory.

To play the levels run the Duke Nukem set-up program and go to the 'Select User Maps' option. The new levels will be listed automatically. Simply hit «KETURN» on the level you want to play. From the main menu when the game has launched select 'Play User Map' and voila, more shotgun action and shitting down alien necks – delightful fun for all the family.

Discworld 2

ORK ON THE SEQUEL TO ONE OF THE biggest PC games ever, Discworld from Perfect Entertainment, is now well under way and early signs indicate that it will be every bit as good as the original bets-seller. Discworld 2 will again feature the incompetent developers have worked closely with author Terry Pratchett to ensure that the humour and substance of the novels is not lost in the transition from print to Pc. Although the game is not based on a particular novel, Pratchett himself has had a lot of input into the game's storyline, the main thrust of the plot being that Death has gone missing and Rincewind (again with Luggage in tow) has been forced to take up the scythe as his impromptu standin. As a result, the quality of both the gags and characterisation should be well up to the very high standard of the original Discworld game, especially as Eric Idle will be providing both the main voice-over and singing the 'theme tune'.

Discourld 2 will also 'star' the voices of Nigel Planer, Kate Robbins and Rob Brydon and will feature all-new high resolution graphics put together from over 30,000 original hand-drawn animations incorporated with the latest 'Toonz' technology. Perfect Entertainment have also gone to great lengths to ensure that the sequel will be more cinematic than the original, by introducing fades, pans and close-ups and making the game full-screen. As well as that they've been working on an improved simple, but immensely flexible, window-driven interface to give the player a lot more control and at the same time allow them to develop some incredibly clever puzzles.

Discworld 2 is due for release just in time for Christmas from Psygnosis. Z

Screamer 2

FYOU THOROUGHLY ENJOYED SCREAMER ON THE PC, THEN YOU'LL NO DOUBT be extremely pleased to hear that the guys at Graffiti have already got Screamer 2 well and truly up to speed.

Although the original arcade racer was the best game of its kind on the Pc, it wasn't what Ridge Racer is to the PlayStation or Sega Rally is to the Saturn. Thanks to a completely new 3D engine that can throw around even more texture-mapped polygons than the original code, it looks as if the PC will have an arcade-style racing game that can compete on equal terms in terms of graphics and playability and leave the other platforms standing when it comes to multi-player races, thanks to a six-way network option.

As well as running much faster and smoother, the sequel will feature six new tracks - all with more hills, bumps and jumps, four new cars, a rear-view mirror (handy for keeping ahead of the pack), increased difficulty settings and day and night versions of each track.

Although the title isn't due for release until October/November time, Screamer 2 already promises to be a marked improvement over the original, and as long as Graffiti sort out the way the cars handle (at the moment they make the Sega Rally cars feel like they're on rails), we should be in for a bit of a corker come Christmas. 2

SIERRA

OU JUST WON'T BE ABLE TO MOVE FOR THIRD-PERSON perspective hack and slash 3D adventures on the PC this summer, and while the genre certainly isn't a new one (Infogrames' Alone In The Dark started it all way back in 1993), when it comes: to hand-to-hand combat, all the efforts to date have been essentially flawed, despite creative key configurations and various (not particularly clever) combat modes that often leave the player more confused than competent.

Hopefully, this is all about to change thanks to a rather brilliant new mouse-controlled melee combat system from developers Treyarch Invention. Known as VSIM Motion Control, the system actually mimics the movement of the player's arm and allows for an unlimited number of combinations.

The first game to use this innovative new interface is the fantasy adventure Die By The Sword, which, if you believe the hype, will be the ultimate hand-tohand combat game. By working out numerous mathematical equations very quickly, VSIM Motion Control can generate the full range of human movement, enabling the player to fully control his motions on the fly, therefore allowing for an unlimited number of combinations and the closest thing to instinctive real-time melee combat on the PC. Although it may seem a little alien at first, Treyarch maintain that with practice players should be able to put together some pretty impressive attacking and defensive custom moves, four of which can be saved into memory and called up at any time, or edited and traded with other players.

As well as the new combat interface. Die By The Sword will feature over 25 different classed enemies - each with their own strengths and weaknesses, a variety of weapons that the player will have to learn how to use (including broadswords, spears and double-bladed axes) and an 'intelligent' camera system that will allow the player to view their character from multiple perspectives. The 3D environment will also be fully interactive with realtime physics: consequently, players will really have to think twice about jumping across chasms, walking, along narrow ledges and exactly who they pick on. Unlike other games of this ilk, contact with an opponent results in realistic damage - which means that the weedy-looking elf with the dagger could easily pommel you to the ground and hack your arm off if you haven't spent a few minutes perfecting your thrusting action.

Die By The Sword will feature both single and multi-play variations and a useful training mode that allows the player to hone his fighting skills in quickplay single opponent combat. There will also be a tournament mode that provides the player with the opportunity to work his way up the tournament ladder by competing against each of the 25 computer opponents, and the option to battle it out in a winnertakes-all fight to the death with up to three other players via a network or modem.

If Treyarch can keep their mouse-driven interface simple and intuitive and tone down the textures they've adopted at this early stage in development, Die By The Sword could well represent a landmark in computer gaming when it's released in time for the Christmas rush. That said, it's up against some tough competition with Into The Shadows from Scavenger, Tomb Raider from Core and Deathtrap Dungeon from Domark (to name just three), all vying for the thirdperson action adventure top spot. 2 awesome Formula 1 from Psygnosis, which has just been released for the Sony PlayStation, is coming to the PC. trade publication has recently been carrying a recruitment ad for a 3D PC programmer to work on an official F1 licenced product. based in Liverpool. Despite our probing questions Psygnosis are remaining tight-lipped as to whether a PC version of the game is planned, and have given no indication as to when the conversion would be released. # Interstate '76

F1 for PC?

DITE POSSIBLY THE COOLEST GAME EVER developed for the PC is due out soon from Activision

Interstate '76 may not be totally original as far as gameplay as concerned, but it's most definitely not just another driving/shooting game set in the dismal future. The thing that really sets it apart from all the other games in this genre is that it's cool. And that's cool in a '70s kinda way.

And we're not talking Brady Bunch here. Interstate '76 is one mean mutha of a game, full of beefy '70s muscle cars, cool dudes with big hair and one funked-up soundtrack. Players team up with auto-vigilante Taurus and cruise the highways looking to face off against a fierce gang of auto terrorists with only their revolvers, eighttracks and attitudes to protect them.

The game features fully texture-mapped graphics and numerous different missions that must be completed to progress through to the end. As the player completes each section he'll be able to equip his car with even cooler weapons and other unique power-ups, until he's strong enough to be crowned 'King of the Road'.

Interstate '76 isn't due for release until around the end of the year and, as we've already said, we think it's shaping up to be the coolest game to ever grace the PC. 7

BULLETIN BULLETIN

Sega converted to PC

a far as 'native' PC development is concerned, with five arcade conversions due for release over the next year, and numerous 'original' PC titles set to follow shortly from the newly-formed development wing known as Sega

Sega maintain that by fully utilising Microsoft's Direct X and Direct 3D development software, they've managed to get all of their forthcoming coin-op conversions to run quite happily on a modest(ish) Pentium (Sega recommend at least a P90) with 8-16Mb of RAM and a 1-bit sound card and running Windows 95, without the need of an accelerator card.

Although the 3D accelerated version of Virtua Fighter Remix was very well received when it was released as a bundle with the Diamond Edge card back in March of this year, the release of a PC 'native' version of the game that can top 30 frames per second and offer high resolution and original arcade modes of play will no doubt appeal to the die-hard beat 'em up fan looking for arcade quality on their Pentium. Of even greater interest however, are the forthcoming PC 'native' conversions of Daytona USA, Sega Rally Championship, Manx TT Superbike and Virtua Cop.

While Daytona USA might look a little dated when compared to the likes of Screamer 2 (see page 10) or even The Need For Speed, Sega promise that a blistering frame rate coupled with proven gameplay will make the title a winner when it's released in the run-up to Christmas. However, the title that hardened PC speed demons are really waiting for is the awesome Sega Rally. With its stunning texture-mapped graphics, in-yer-face off-road action and fantastic handling it should really get the adrenaline pumping, though quite how the action will translate via a PC keyboard is anyone's guess. Manx TT (which like Rally is due for release at the beginning of the next year) could also suffer from the same keyboard control problems. If you've played the arcade version of either Rally or Manx TT. you'll be well aware how much they both rely on large (and expensive) player input devices to elevate the games to a new level of realism. That said, Manx TT (and Indeed Rally) is both visually stunning and very playable, and if Sega can keep the frame rate and graphical detail up, they could have a couple of speeding beauties for the PC come next spring.

Last up, and due for release in time for Christmas is the excellent Virtua Cop. Again, there's a chance that the gameplay could suffer without the pistol control that has proved such a draw in the arcades, but the PC version is already very playable with the mouse and looks quite awesome. One conversion that shouldn't suffer from lack of peripherals and special add-ons is Sonle PC. Billed as a 'perfect' conversion, the console favourite will feature over 60 levels, a bilstering 30 frames per second frame rate and all the playability of the Mega Drive classics.

Ecstatica 2

LIHOUGH A NAME HAS YET TO BE DECIDED ON (ECSTATICA 2 IS THE working title), work is well under way on the sequel to one of the best looking games of last year from Andrew Spencer and Psygnosis. This time round it should look even better, thanks to highly detailed angles (the game already boasts over 2000) and at the same time keep the attention focused on the main character so that the close-quarter combat is more realistic and fluid.

As well as numerous fairies, goblins, vampires and ghosts pursuing FITLE BIG ADVENTURE MUST go down in gaming history as one of the best graphical adventures ever made. As a result, developers Adeline thought that it might be a good idea to make a sequel, and that's just what they've done.

Hence, LBA 2 is now well on the way and is due for release early next year. It follows on from where the first game left off and features the same loveable hero Twinsen and his wife Zoe (who's now expecting a child) and the dastardly dictator FunFrock

As well as looking utterly fantastic (just check out the screenshots), the developers have added a few new camera angles in an attempt to make LBA 2 less restrictive, and have made the whole player environment much bigger. They've also retained the familiar (and easy to use) character control method and concentrated on making the puzzles a lot more involved.

Basically, Little Big Adventure 2 is more of the same, with a couple of tweaks but then again, if it ain't broke ... Z

OR MANY ARMCHAIR GOLF ENTHUSIASTS LINKS IS STILL THE GAME OF CHOICE It's been a hell of a long time coming, but the much needed update is finally upon us in the form of Links LS.

Many of the features people asked for in the first game have now been implemented, such as match play, best ball and skins. The graphics have had a bit of a facelift too, with high-end PC owners being able to play the game in hi-res with up to 16.7 million colours and at resolutions up to 1280x1024. Eldos have signed up Arnold Palmer for the first game in the LS series. which gives them the perfect excuse to film him doing his thing and telling you how crap you are at golf. The game also features multimedia clips of Arnold's personal library and workshop, which we suppose somebody will find useful. Arnie's home course at Latrobe is included with the game, as are the Plantation Club and Village courses at Kapalua.

We haven't seen very much of the game apart from the screenshots on this page, but as the PC Zone gang are all confirmed Links addicts we're going to stupidly predict that Links LS will be the best golf game in the world, ever. Probably. Links LS will hopefully be out next month, so expect a full review in the next issue.

UST AS EVERY DEVELOPER IN THE LAND SEEMS to be suffering from sequelitis, Psygnosis have announced that they are currently working on Destruction Derby 2.

Promising even more bumper-to-bumper action, the sequel boasts completely new, longer, faster, wider tracks, with hills, jumps and highspeed banked corners, as well as a new Pits feature that will allow racers to repair damage and complete the race. Cars will roll, tumble and cartwheel before hitting the dirt and bits will fly off as they collide with each other. As well as the normal championship league and practice modes, DD2 will house a new 'Stunt n' Smash' facility that will allow players to rig up flying stunts and cause maximum car carnage.

In the same vein and due to be released at around the same time is Monster Trucks, an offroad racing game from the same developers, Reflections. Players will be able to drive numerous different vehicles, all with accurate suspension, including buggies and monster trucks, over fully texture-mapped terrain ranging from wide open deserts to vast misty forests. As well as the usual championship and practice options, players will have the option to take part in short training circuits, car crushing competitions, time trial challenges and the monster endurance rally itself.

All tracks and competitions will feature complete freedom of movement with changing weather patterns and terrain, and Monster Trucks will be one of the first games to incorporate some stunning new special effects, among which you'll encounter dust clouds, water spray, lens flare and fog.

Both Destruction Derby 2 and Monster Trucks are due for release in December. Z

TOMB RAIDER DELAYED Core Design have had to put back the release. date of their 3D third-person perspective game on the PSX first. This has affected the PC development schedule and knocked back the release date for the PC version (which incidentally, looks much better than the PSX product) to around October/November time although from what we've seen so far, it'll be worth the wait. With its super-smooth texturemapped 3D accelerated graphics and cheeky girly herolne, we predict that Tomb Raider will be one of the biggest games of the year.

ORGANIC ART

If you're bored with your screensaver, then check out the new Organic Art 3D Living Screensaver and Evolutionary Art Generator designed by international computer artist William Latham. As well as featuring over 100 3D screensaver scenes, the software allows you to create your own organic art using the 'Evolutionary Generator' with over 400 million combinations to explore alongside the opportunity to seriously chill out to the ambient tunes. If you're still a little unsure of whether it's your thing or not, here's an explanation from Latham himself to set your mind at rest: "My work can be viewed as a metaphor for man's relationship with nature through modern technology, I am mutating the types of extraordinary artificial lifeforms that one day could be commonplace in genetic engineering." Better grab your £29.99 and go and buy it then, hadn't you?

Those nice people at Maris are continuing their quest to educate PC owners with the release of two new titles. The Origins Of Mankind gives you a chance to see how mankind evolved, whereas Discover Astronomy doesn't: it lets: you mess about with stars and stuff. For more details call Maris on 0171-221 3754.

TFX 3

ID HAVE ANNOUNCED THAT THEY ARE CURRENTLY working on the sequel to EF2000, and they are telling anyone who will listen that it already blows their original technology out of the sky.

Designed to fully exploit the benefits of Windows 95, it will offer players new ways of accessing and controlling the flow of battle as well as the chance to pilot the awesome F-22 or become a tactical commander aboard an E-3 Sentry AWACS aircraft. The follow-up will also benefit from an easy to set up, point-and-click GUI, sophisticated on-line help and an impressive new terrain and aircraft rendering system. As a result, landscapes will now be enhanced with dramatically different lighting to reflect the changes throughout the day in time and weather, and low-flying aircraft will be just as difficult to recognise as they are in real life.

Other features include an improved AI-controlled campaign generator with full mission planning built in, refined multiple wingmen control with data linking, better enemy AI, multiple alliance possibilities (which will make it more difficult to predict who will be supporting who in any given scenario), interactive on-line graphical help, a new AWACS control screen which will allow employment of tactics in real-time, and network support for up to eight players - and that's just for starters.

In the meantime, look out for Super EF2000 for Windows 95, which is due for release very soon. It's essentially the same as the pos version, but features a Tactical Mission Planner which allows players to plot their own sorties within a campaign, simple to use point-and-click on-line interactive contextsensitive help, and network support for up to eight players via tpx. As well as running slightly faster, Super EF2000 will run in 256-colour mode and above in either a window or full-screen mode.

Back down to Earth with a bump, and on to the battle tank simulation currently in development and tentatively known as Tanks. In fact, it can't really be classed as a game as yet, but DID are confident that the Ground Warfare Technology Demonstrator originally developed for real tank warfare training will make for an awesome game. As well as being the first project to use DID's new dynamic ground technology, Tanks (or whatever it will be called) will feature accurate ground-vehicle modelling, photorealistic terrain mapping, SVGA graphics, accurately modelled ballistics, dead clever enemy AI, and network support for up to eight players.

DID have yet to reveal if and when players will be able to dial into a DID generated real-time battle arena full of other tanks, F-22s and EF2000s, although there's no doubt that their ultimate aim is to create a massive campaign environment that players will be able to enter and leave in their tank or aircraft at whim. If things continue to develop at such a fantastic rate, maybe it will indeed be a reality within a couple of years. 7 s WELL AS DEVELOPING THE NEW AND IMPROVED VOXEL SPACE 2 Technology, Novalogic have been busy grafting away to bring us a new fixed-wing flight sim which uses their new polygon-based engine called F-ZZ Lightning.

F-22 Lightning

To say the game is graphically stunning would be something of an understatement. To say it's in the same league as Flight Millimited wouldn't quite do it justice either, so let's just say that it's about as close to being photo-realistic as you can get on a home PC. What's more, it's pretty smooth and pacey when running on a Pentium (Novalogic have pledged total support for Intel's new MMX - Multi-Media-eXpansion - chip), the detail doesn't disappear at low altitude and the landscape area is absolutely vast.

Novalogic have apparently concentrated a lot of time into making sure that as many of the features of the actual aircraft have been incorporated into the game as possible. As a result, F-22 lightning should appeal to hardened propeller heads and general gamers alike, as the new technology means it's fun to fly, user-friendly and less tedious to control than many of the 20th century fighters.

"This game accurately represents the F-22 which is specifically designed by its manufacturers to be one of the easiest jet fighters in the world to fly," maintains Novalogic's John Garcia. "This will make the game more user-friendly to all gamers of all skill levels and they'll be able to use this product with little or no learning curve, yet it remains as faithful to the actual aircraft as any hardcore flight sim."

As well as a campaign mode and a Quick Mission editor which will allow players to get straight into the action, F-22 will feature 'live action' mission briefings that use Novalogic's new video decompression technology plus the option to play two-player co-operative missions through a modem or by direct connect, or against up to seven others via a network. F-22 Lightning is due for release in September. 2

Warcraft 2 expansion set

ABLAC HAVE JUST ANNOUNCED THAT WARCHAFT 2: BEYOND THE DARK PORTAL is out now – and they're cunningly marketing as a sequel to Warcraft 2 rather than just a bunch of new levels for the game.

As it happens, there's a lot of stuff in the expansion set to back up this claim, such as 24 new scenarios, two completely new storylines, 50 new maps of unexplored territory and an all-new tile set of the Orcish swamplands. As well as new and improved graphics, Beyond The Dark Portal also features new 30 cinematics, new legendary hero characters and new unit speech (let's hope they've got rid of that awful voice-over for the peasants).

Of course, in order to enjoy all these fabbo new features in the set, you'll need to own a copy of Warcraft 2 to start with. You can rush to the shops now and buy Beyond The Dark Portal for around £19.99. 2

That's Entertainment

TO THE RITHERTAINMENT IS A NEW DEVELOPMENT COMPANY formed by Harry Holmwood, formerly of Sony Computer Entertainment. Harry, the company's MD, has worked on Total NBA for the PlayStation (among others), so he knows a thing or two about games. Also on the team are various people who have worked on top titles for developers Intelligent Games, such as Azrael's Tear released by Mindscape (which was very well received here at Zone) and the not so good Sim Isle published by Maxis.

Pure are a relatively small team of only five people, but they expect to double in size in the next couple of months. Their first title, TF-30, won't be with us until September next year, but as you can see from the screenshots it's looking pretty smart already. Pure won't rell us anything about the game other than it's an underwater strategy/adventure-type thing, but you can be sure that we'll be keeping tabs on the company's progress throughout the year. So watch this space. Z

SHOOPING AT SHIPER

While snooping around the offices of VIE's newly named in-house development team Burst, we stumbled across a brilliant new Internet game currently in development and known as Sniper. Originally a pilot project written specifically to test the water as faras Internet gaming goes, it seems the chapsat Burst have got a red-hot game on their hands. Admittedly it's only a simple Star Control meets Asteroids style game, but the fact that you actually get to zap other on-line players gives you immense satisfaction, and erefore elevates the game to immediateclassic status. VIE aren't sure whether Sniper will make it to release or not. However, now they've got the technology, the idea is to release an X-Wing/TIE Fighter style game. over the Internet. We live in hone

MOUSE IN DOOM MYSTERY

Logitech have announced their new mouse, the MouseMan 96. Apparently it has a three-button pointing device designed for use with Windows 95, programmable buttons and is allegedly very attractive – atthough whether it's any good for playing duske and Doom is aryone's guess. MouseMan 96 must be pretty good at something however, because Logitech have sold over one million of the things; they reckon they carn mandrature at average of four mice every second. Acclaim are busy working on a 3D real-time, network strategy game called Stratosphere. As a young Aerial Naval cadet, you must build and deploy a series of immense floating fortresses in your quest to destroy an evil Baron and his army bent on planetary conquest. Although it won't be ready for release until the end of the year, the final game will feature 360-degree hilly rotational camera views, over 100 different weapons and energy resources, and four-player network or internet play. If you enjoy playing resource management games. Ilike SimCity and strategy titles such as C&C, Statosphere may well be worth a took:

Movie news

continuing to blur, with new movie licences being announced every week and the big movie boys getting in on the interactive action.

Fox Interactive recently signed a deal with Electronic Arts to distribute all of their forthcoming releases, which not only include the rather excellent Simpsons Cartoon Studio which allows you to create and direct your very own Simpsons cartoons, but also a new Simpson adventure game/cool thing to have on your PC entitled The Simpsons: Virtual Springfield, in which you get to fully explore the Simpsons' home town, interact with the inhabitants and dabble with some 'Simpsonised' arcade games.

They'll also be releasing the much-hyped Jaguar release Alien Vs Predator for the PC early next year, and what promises to be one of the biggest game licences ever... X-Files. Although few details about the game have been released as yet. Fox have revealed that the game will 'star' both Gillian 'Scully' Anderson and David 'Mulder' Duchovny and that both actors are currently filming scenes that will be used exclusively in the game. The X-Files product will also be one of the first Fox releases to use Hyperbole Studios' VirtualCinema technology.

Developed exclusively for the X-Files game, it's basically a sophisticated engine that measures the responses and activities of the player and then cleverly applies them back to the original storyline, so while you're essentially free to do whatever you want, what you say or do will always gently nudge you back towards the web-like storyline, which incidentally, was developed in conjunction with the show's creator, Chris Carter.

Due for a much earlier release is Die Hard Trilogy. Although it's being billed as three games in one, it's essentially three different episodes (an adventure bit, a shooting bit and a driving bit) neatly enveloped within the rather insubstantial storyline(s) of the three films. Die Hard Trilogy will apparently be compatible with 'targeting peripherals' (ie light guns) and steering wheels, so at best we can expect a Virtua Cop come Quarantine hybrid with an adventure/find things bit tacked onto the front

Although few people can deny that the blockbuster movie Independence Day looks impressive, the game of the same name, which is in essence a futuristic flight sim/shoot 'em up, smacks of unoriginality. Players must assemble an armed fleet comprised of mankind's greatest fighter jets and then blast the hell out of the alien enemy while flying over "recognisable cityscapes". If it's a case of Terminal Velocity with FMV then it's unlikely to prove as popular as the film, but Fox are confident that the hype generated by the movie will be enough to convince PlayStation and Saturn owners that Independence Day is a must-have.

Not to be outdone by the new (rich) kids on the block, licence aficionados Acclaim (part of mega movie moguls United Artists) are hitting back with Alien Trilogy for the PC. The Play-Station version of the game did extremely well, being described in some circles as "the thinking man's Doom" - so as long as the PC conversion is comparable, they've got a sure-fire hit on their hands come the summer. However, whether or not Dragonheart: Fire & Steel will prove quite as popular on the PC remains to be seen. The movie, which has just opened in the States, features the voice of Sean Connery and some of the best computer-generated effects since Jurassic Park, is sure to be a summer smash, although the game, which is essentially an extremely pretty 'stroll along and beat 'em up' is more likely to appeal to the younger console crowd than a PC player brought up on a diet of Ecstatica and LBA.

The Crow: City Of Angels on the other hand, looks utterly fantastic and should appeal to the hardened PC key basher. The developers are obviously fans of the aforementioned Ecstatica, because The Crow looks and plays very similarly to the Psygnosis classic, which is definitely not a bad thing at all. Whether the Blade Runner game, which is currently in development at Westwood, will live up to the massive expectations already surrounding the project is anyone's guess, although an early look at the graphics suggests that it will at least look awesome and serve to enhance Westwood's already highly enviable reputation. Mission Impossible from Ocean also looks promising, though like Blade Runner (which is due out around October), there isn't much to see in the way of gameplay as yet. One thing's for sure however - it definitely won't be a platform game.

On a completely different note, 7th Level are putting the final touches to Monty Python's Quest For The Holy Grail, a pythonesque laugh-a-minute point-and-click graphical adventure starring Eric Idle (among others) which is due for release very shortly, while Ace Ventura: Pet Detective, an adventure/arcade style game based on the cartoon series of the whacky film starring Jim Carrey, is in the stores now. More news on licences to print money next month. 2

Microsoft wake up

Microsoft are finally getting well up to speed with their games development, with 11 brand new titles planned for release over the next 12 months.

LTHOUGH MICROSOFT HAVEN'T REALLY been known as a games developer, they're actually the sixth largest PC game publisher in the world (Flight Simulator is the world's most popular PC entertainment title, selling an incredible total of more than 1.5 million copies worldwide) and they're now fixing their sights firmly on the more mainstream gamesplayer (!).

First up is Deadly Tide, a fast-action 3p shoot 'em up set underwater. Okay, it may be just another shoot 'em up, but at least it's got some kind of a pedigree. The game's graphics were designed by the very same Hollywood designers who created the 3D graphics for both Sea Quest and Star Trek: The Next Generation, and players will be able to fully explore the underwater environment thanks to a spherical 360-degree view and gawp at the seamless cinematic sequences so cleverly integrated by developers Rainbow Studios and TRG3

Also due for release around the same time is Hellbender from developers Terminal Reality. Another 3D shoot 'em up, Hellbender is set in the sci-fi future and players must pilot their trusty Hellbender craft across three parallel playing fields: the planet's surface, vast caverns in the planet's interior and above the clouds. As well as a plot written by sci-fi screenwriter Geoff Miller (DeepStar VI), the game is narrated by top babe Gillian 'X-Files' Anderson and features multi-player network or modem support for up to eight players.

GEX isn't a 3D shoot 'em up, but a sidescrolling action game with a 'zany' storyline from developers Crystal Dynamics. 'Starring' the voice of comedian Dana Gould (of HBO comedy specials) GEX is a PC conversion of the acclaimed console version of GEX, that takes the player through a world of classic TV shows and B-movies. As well as featuring over 300 wisecracks, the main character GEX was brought to life with more than 450 frames of animation and state of the art Silicon Graphics 3D models, so if it ain't funny, at least it should look nice. GEX is due for release in November.

Back on more familiar territory, Microsoft Flight Simulator for Windows 95 still looks like being the most realistic civilian aviation sim available, thanks to enhanced photo-realistic graphics, two new aircraft (the Aerobatic Plane Extra 300 and a Boeing 737), more new cities and airports (including London, Tokyo, New York, Paris, Seattle and Hong Kong) and interactive flying lessons that teach the novice pilot everything from basic skills to advanced manoeuvres. As well as AutoInstall and AutoPlay, Flight Simulator 95 will also feature multimedia elements, including demonstrations of complex flying manoeuvres (such as a Cuban Eight) by aerobatics champion Patty Wagstaff. Flight Simulator 95 is due for release in November.

On a less serious note comes Monster Truck Madness, a big-wheeled monster-truck racing sim that will allow players to race their texturemapped monster vehicles around numerous tracks (drag, circuit or rally) against computercontrolled monsters or up to eight other players over a network. Each vehicle is modelled on a 'real-life' truck and features four-wheel steering and accurate vehicle physics, so they jump, bounce and roll authentically. Monster Truck Madness is due for release in October.

As well as action games, Microsoft are busy working on a couple of strategy titles too. Close Combat isn't just another World War II strategy game however - in an attempt to do something a little different the developers have decided to focus on the human aspects of war. Combat psychologists have even been drafted in to work on the AI and personalities of the soldiers, and as a result - as well as developing a battle winning strategy - players will have to show true leadership qualities in order to motivate their troops. As you'd expect, the game is historically accurate, and will allow players to command the US 29th or German 352nd infantries during conflict from Normandy to Saint-Lo France Close Combat is due at the end

Age Of Empires is yet another variation on the Civilization-style theme that spans tens of thousands of years. Starting with virtually nothing, players must build their small Ice Age tribe to the verge of a great civilisation. Players can choose to co-operate or conquer their neighbours with existing tribes in a multi-player environment, do battle on land or sea, or attempt to establish peaceful relations and trade resources. As well as combat, the game focuses much of the player's attention on resource management, and players must assign certain tribe members to hunt, explore, conquer or build as well as apply new technology if their tribe is to advance. Age of Empires is due for release in the spring next year.

To complete the portfolio, Microsoft also have three sports titles on the way, all of which are due for release at the end of the year.

NBA Piull Court Press is a five-on-five basketball game that features motion-captured players and an At that was developed with the help of actual NBA coaches and players. Like every other basketball game on the market, it's positively crammed full of player and team stats and will offer head-to-head play over a network or via a modem.

Microsoft Golf 3.0 should be familiar territory to anyone who's played the previous games. The new version features new and improved > graphics, a dozen add-on courses and the option to play against friends via a network or modem.

And last but not least, Microsoft Soccer is on its way. It will feature motion-captured players, numerous tactical and team options and the ability to play against other players via a modem or LAN. And all that's just for starters. 7

At home with...

Charlie Brooker arrived at the Cranberry Source headquarters in a fluster. He left in a car. Because he's an incredibly versatile guy, really.

OW THERE'S A STUPID NAME FOR A COMPANY IF EVER I heard one. Cranberry Source — "we deliberately chose a silly name because we knew people would remember it" — are a fresh new software house situated in sunny North Finchley. And while the name of the company is new, the two men in the driving seat have been involved in the games industry for over a decade. And they're both called John.

John Cook and John Ritman, actually. Cook is an experienced industry 'suit', who's represented companies such as Bullfrog, Maxis and Sensible Software. Furthermore, in a former life as Mr Development at Mirrorsoft, he was instrumental in securing the first commercial release of Fatris (the 'falling blocks' game that looked like shit, but proved eight times more addictive than crack cocaine). When it comes to games, he knows his onions (and, indeed, how to market them).

John number two is Mr John Ritman. If that name rings a bell, then you're probably remembering some of the titles he's been responsible for in the past (fondly-recalled games such as Head Over Heels and Match Day on the ZX Spectrum). Ritman is something of a hardened gaming veteran, and is no doubt kept awake at night by ghoulish flashbacks involving rubber keyboards, RAM-packs, and tape-loading difficulties.

The two decided to form their own company one afternoon following a conversation in a local pub, during which they bemoaned the current state of the games industry. Both of them believe that basic gameplay – the most important factor in any release – has been largely ignored as companies scrabble to produce games which look and sound better than their rivals, even if they're hollow on the inside. The average gameplayer needed saving from this onslaught of vapid 'bimbo' titles, they reckoned. Which is why, in the time-honoured tradition of Superhero 'teams' such as the Fantastic Four, they rolled their sleeves up and founded Cranberry Source. And now, it's clobberin' time...

A quick word with the two Johns

Charlie Brooker: So... how long have you been going then? John Ritman: We were formed just over a year ago, doing the deals that gave us the contracts to get going. CB: Ducking and diving, wheeling and dealing?

peek at QAD. As you can see, it doesn't take itself too seriously.

(Right) Messrs Ritman and Cook break the ice by holding an impromptu farting contest. First to turn the air brown wins.

IR: That's the stuff.

John Cook: It involves putting a tie on. I put a tie on, and then we wheel John in, in a crate. And we say, 'It's him - he does the stuff.' And I do the lunches.

IR: He's the executive in charge of getting the shirt off your back.

JC: And doing lunches and signing cheques. And playing Quake.

"Thanks to their respective track records, John and John had a fairly easy time while seeking out a deal. They eventually signed with Philips Media...

By: It was quite nice going around and doing the deals. I've got quite a good reputation out there, and we went round with just a few pages describing the products. And I know that most companies would like to receive a huge document with every pixel described, but I don't work that way.

Sprout, sprout, let it all out...

CB: So what titles are you working on?

JR: We've got three titles. The first one's called QAD, which stands for Quintessential Art of Destruction. The second one's a football title, and then we have a game called Redemption. QAD is a two-player game, flying over a landscape. It's basically about rescuing hostages... which has been done before... CB: Like, say, Defender.

JC: Which is the best game ever ...

JR: Everyone keeps saying Choplifter. We've got some nice twists in it. It's a two-player game – two computers networked up – and basically you have to rescue 75 per cent of the living hostages. Notice the word 'living'. It's quite acceptable, if you deem it tactical, to kill a few. There's also some 'hostage' pods' which you drop in order to rescue them. And you can nick pods off your opponents, blow them up... or raid your opponent's base and steal the hostages that he's already collected ther.

CB: Poor bastards. They probably just want to get out of there. JR: Exactly. Anyway, we've got some nice technology in there. Fractal landscapes, polar sprouts...

CB: Polar sprouts?

IC: Yeah, Yeah, Don't ask,

R: Polar sprouts are really nice. You can draw a 30 object without any polygons. It means that, although the original models are created with polygons, we don't have to restrict the number of polygons that make it into the final game because there aren't any. In effect, every single pixel is a different 'face'. They look pretty damn smooth, and best of all, they're fast.

And indeed, he's right. Having seen some of the Cranberry team demonstrating a few 'Polar Sprout' objects, I can vouch for their speed, detail, and smoothness. How on earth they've achieved this effect is beyond me. Not that anyone would tell me, possibly because a li's their little secret, or by I looked far too stupid to possibly understand the concept. 'Sprouted' objects have the appearance of fully-rendered, rounded 30 objects (albeit in a slightly lower resolution), which move, rotate, and morph with the fluidity you'd expect from a 20 sprite. Very smart indeed, and they're not the only trick up Cranberry's sleeve...

JR: For our soccer game – the working title is The Net – we may be using sprouts. But it's possible that we might use a new system we've just invented... called SCIMS.

CB, SCIMS?

JR: It stands for Surface Contoured Interpolated Models. CB: What does that mean?

JR: It means that they look exactly like polar sprouts. But they're much faster and prettier.

Well, that's that cleared up, then.

And finally...

CB: What about Redemption?

JR: That's our epic....

John then goes on to explain the basic concept behind Redemption. In summary, it'll be a very large action-cum-puzzlecum-exploration game, using several different viewpoints.

Parts of it are Doom-like, parts of it hark back to the classic isometric platform/puzzle games of yore (such as Head Over Heels, another of John's past glories), and parts of it take place outdoors. In vehicles. It's quite ambitious, in other words. JC. To rationalise how we've got all this different stuff in one game, we've come up with quite a weird scenario which involves a mad, serial-killer surgeon who's grafting bits onto you. All this stuff takes place in your own head, and each level is a different operation. It's, er, a bit odd really.

Rt It's a bit odd, isn't it?

Odd it may be, but the concept seems sound enough. Indeed, if the two Johns and their programming team can deliver the kind of quality gameplay they're promising, Cranberry Source could turn out to be the flavour of the month for many months to come. The first helpings will be dolloped onto the giant 'software market' plate soon. Whether we'll send it back to the kitchen, or gobble up the lot with gusto and demand seconds, remains to be sen. Either way, it's still a stupid name for a company, z

An early 'Imagine' game in which you play the part of a toothbrush flying around inside a cavernous gob. Your mission - to seek out and destroy rampaging sweets and plaque before all the teeth around you rot away to nothing.

2) JET SET WILLY

Guide a top-hatted miner-cum-millionaire through a sprawling mansion packed to the rathers with piroueting rabbits, disembodied gurning faces and giant rolling eggs. Somehow, it didn't seem odd at the time.

O THE SERVICE

Surreal, iconic paranoid fantasy in which a scary evil entity sits on top of a hill and tries to stare at you. If it stares at you too long, you die. You fight back by planting trees and then absorbing them. Honest, (it used to give me nightmares, and incidentally, a PC sequel is in the works.)

(1) PI-MANIA

Unbelievably odd adventure thing starring The Pirman - a pink, rude bloke with a suspiciously phallic nose who was supposed to represent everyone's favourite endlessly decimal-pointed number. It later spawned a 0-Bert clone (also starring the Pi-Man) which had a reggae song on the 8-side of the cassetta. The song was called RastariarPi and was sung by the programmer.

X-COM: Diary Part 3 Apocalypse

MicroProse continue to burn the midnight oil working on the third instalment in the totally brilliant X-COM series, while Chris Anderson plays the dedicated journo and continues to annoy them with 'interesting' questions.

E'RE NEARLY THERE... WE'RE nearly there. Well, sort of. Word has it round MicroProse way that the X-COM project is 'really coming together'. It's also rumoured to be 'absolutely fabulous' with allegedly 'eye-poppingly go (Below) Last month's picture of a big gun proved so popular with you all that I've got an even bigger one this month. the chaps at MicroProse have given me their solemn word that come next month I will definitely be enjoying lengthy XCOM sessions. Nothing for it then I suppose but to shake the dust off my book of interesting questions, target one of the dudes working on the game and annoy them with posers of world-shattering importance such as, "When will the bloody thing be finished?".

Last month, I phoned up Julian Gollop from Mythos Games (for it is they who are the developing force) and completely wasted his time with silly questions. For this issue I've decided to turn my attention to his brother Nick instead, who goes under the impressive title of Programming Director. Nick reckons the game will be out late September, but as he asked me not to quote him on that, you can completely disregard this whole sentence.

In his enthusiasm to get across to me the general wonderfulness of the whole X-COM thing however, he did let something slip – apparently there's a will be the first game in the series to support network play. I have to admit that at this revelation I almost lost all my street cred and very nearly fell off my chair in excitement. X-COM over a network? [Cool-ola.

As Nick puts it: "Network gaming is the biggest thing in rc games at the moment. No matter how much fun you have playing a game, it just doesn't compare with the kick you get from pitting your wits against a human opponent, so we've decided to look at putting in a multi-player option. I can't say for stree that the network code will be in the final version, but we've got the preliminary work on the network stuff out of the way, and it seems to be working well."

As you can surmise from Nick's comments, there's still a possibility that the multi-player code won't make it into the final game (damn and double damn), but I'll be able to give you a definite 'yes' or 'no' in the next part of my diary. Fingers crossed till then, eh?

Let's speculate

In addition to the new network option, Mythos are looking at producing a Windows 95 specific version which (if they decide to go ahead with it) will support DirectDraw (for super-speedy graphics) and DirectPlay (for the network side of things), and hopefully this will result in a product far superior than the one for bos. Although this particular version is still subject to confirmation, Nick went to great lengths in stressing that there will definitely be a normal pos version as well, so Windows 95 cynics need not worry unduly.

So how far away are Mythos from unleashing the final product? Over to Nick: "We've finished all the real-time tactical stuff, and we're now about to start work on the turn-based side of the game. XcOM veterans will be very familiar with this aspect, so we want to make sure we get it right. We've also got most of the basic artificial intelligence in, and we're taking a look at the final graphics which we've just got from the MicroProse art team. Generally, we've pretty close to having something that's not too far away from what the finished game will look like."

Well, that's just about it for this gripping entry, but don't miss next month's thrilling instalment in which I, the fearless Chris-ola, will be coming face to face with X-COM 3: Apocalypse, possibly the single most important title in gaming history. Z (Left) it's a bike. I'm not sure exactly who gets to sit in it yet. Good though, innit?

Meet the cast

Well, some of them anyway. X-COM 3, as you may well have gathered by now, is somewhat different to its two predecessors. Perhaps the most noticeable difference is in the way you Interact with other factions in the game: although you don't actually speak to any of the other characters, you can follow them about to see what they're up to. You can get very detailed information on them too, and this will come in very handy when you're deciding whose side to take in a politically sensitive situation. It also tells you who your friends are and, more importantly, exactly who has decided to join forces with the alien rotters. As a taster, let me introduce you to some of the folk you'll be meeting in the game.

THE SHARES

The mayor is a very important bod indeed, the controls the senate. He also controls your funding, so if you piss him of he'll promptly sut you eff from all the loot, and you'll have to dream up alternative ways of funding X-COM. You but you'll piss off the mayor.

The fuzz start out as X-COM allies, spo they'll be pretty friendly towards you. However, upset them and they will prove formidable foes, but if you get on the wrong side of them it's even more annoying because they're all over the bloody place. Top tip: don't piss off the police. (I haven't got a picture of the

Your average civilian is, er, pretty average, but the civilians in the slum areas can unass into gangs, and these can be useful alliances. Needless to say, if you rub them up the wrong way they can be quite the opposite. Rich civilians are useful people to get to know for obvious reasons.

Cyberstorm

"Here, preview this," said the Zone bods, "You'll love it." "Thanks," said the ever polite and gullible Duncan MacDonald, taking the brown paper bag. "What is it?" Ten seconds later he knew... It was a turn-based hex strategy game with the word 'cyber' in the title. Bastards!

EX GAMES. PAH! NOW I'VE SAID IT before and I don't mind saying it again: people who play these things are the same as those who wear army camouflage jackets and hang around in public tollets waiting for stray kiddies to wander in. Or in the lesser stages of hex addiction, they're the annoying sods who stand oblivious on the left of tube escalators in rush hour and delight in squeezing up too close to women in crammed carriages.

But what about Civilization?

Hmmm. Yes, I suppose I will have to grudgingly concede that Civilization Is a hex game, and I do actually happen to like it. But there's always an exception to every rule, and in this particular case the exceptions to the pervert/annoying bastard one are Civilization, Civilization 2 and Colonization. I still stand firmly by my rule, so I'll be on very dodgy ground indeed if at any point during this preview it appears that I'm actually getting into the idea of Cyberstorm. To this end I've rigged myself up to a pulse monitor: any stirrings within and a ninja-Decibel klaxon will go off, enabling me to give myself a bloody good shake and regain immediate self-control.

Okay, Cyberstorm is set like dead in the future, and it's full of robots. DING-DING-DING-DING-DING-DING!!

Shit! Look, that was an accident, okay? I accidentally knocked the klaxon with my shoulder. I'll start again...

Right. Cyberstorm's set in the future, but it's basically about, erm, mining (phew). There are all these different planets and moons and things see, and they contain ores and stuff. Some contain more than others, others more than the rest, and on and on. And guess what? Yup, it appears that it's your duty to collect as much of this ore as possible. The problem is, however, that your's isn't the only mining corporation on the scene. (But let's face it, if it was the only mining corporation you'd never get to kill anything, would you?) DING-DING-DING-DING-DING/[[Oamn.]

Hercs and Derms...

Now here we get onto the subject of plot, which isn't going to be an easy task because this is a preview, you understand, and with previews the writer always has less than the full amount to go on. In general there's the merest scrap of a game, yet reams upon reams of 'printed material', and on occasion it's not much more than a screenshot and a promise. In the case of Cyberstorm, however, I've got a massive and seemingly unbugged lump of game (hooray), but no written information whatsoever (boo). Please bear this in mind as I guess my way through the next couple of paragraphs...

Derms and Hercs...

DING-DING-DING-DING-DING!! (Bugger!)

Sorry, I'll just get my breath back. These hydraulic exoskeletom doofers are the hardware of choice for the futuristic mining corporations of Cyberstorm. Indeed, they construct many different models, from small fast ones to large slow ones and beyond – and these are the Hercs. Some make good scouts while others are more suited to the role of simple workhorses with large capacity ore-carrying abilities. Others – budget permitting, of course – can be armed to the hilt with devastating weaponry.

Hercs are only exo-skeletons too, so they need drivers - which is where the Derms come in. Bioderms are genetically-engineered people, and you make them yourself in a vat. As you can probably guess, the quality of your creations depends on how much dosh you can afford to pour in. You can make loads of shit Derms, for instance, or go for the all eggs in one basket routine of forking out heavily for just a single very, very skilled one. You know the drill. However, it's worth mentioning that there's still room for improvement with even the really shite Derms - you can school them (for cash) in varying subjects such as piloting, technology, missile aiming and so forth.

Who drives what?

Obviously, now as with all resource management-style games...

DING-DING-DING-DING-DING-DING!!
Whaaaaat? I couldn't have set the klaxon off – all I said was 'resource management-style games'...

DING-DING-DING-DING-DING-DING-IIIM
Himm, there must be a fault.
Anyway, as I said, with all resource management-style games you begin with a minimum amount of units. In the case of Opherstorm you get two pisspoor Hercs and two useless Bioderms, so deciding which Bioderm will drive which Herc is easy; it, the game however,

this stuff, but for those who don't there appears to be a handy option called 'autolink' where the pc looks at each individual Derm and assigns him/her/it to the most suitable craft.

What about the battles?

DING-DING-DING-DING-DING!! (Piss!) Okay, here's a sample mission. You've got two Hercs to play with; the planet you land on is rich in ore; and your objective is to mine at least 500 ore units. Oh, and the planet is rocky and hilly to boot (terrain affects the distance Hercs can travel per turn). You switch the inset global map (initially blacked out à la Civilization) to highlight the ore locations and send out the fastest Herc - it averages say, 30 hexes per go. Two turns later it discovers an ore field. You engage its Extractor, give it a route, and press 'continue' in its movement menu. Meanwhile, you instruct your slower Herc (which is more heavily armed) to head for the ore field as well. Three turns later it gets there, just as the scout Herc has almost reached its full capacity. A further three turns and both Hercs are chocka. You've got 800 ore units, and no means of extracting more because you didn't bother to buy extra storage facilities for either last time you were at base.

So what happens next? Do you head back to your drop-off ship and return to HQ with your objectives exceeded? No, because your scout Herc's grade 3 scanners, crap as they are, have picked up an enemy mining vehicle – and you

hadn't even dreamed of. DING-DING-DING-DING-DING-DING!!

Your turn again. Stay and fight?

Or leg it back to the Drop Zone?

You leg it, and your scout Herc puts on a good show. Your slower-moving escort Herc, however, fares a trifle worse. Yes, it gets in a few shots before it's destroyed, but it's still destroyed – along with its 400 ore units. You swear that vengeance will be yours...

Ring my bell (N-o-o-ooo!!)

It has been a very rare occasion indeed that I've found myself addicted to a preview copy of a game, especially a hex one. If I mention the words Command 5 Conquer though, you might possibly understand how Cyberstorm snuck up and got me in its grip, because it has a very similar vibe. The terrain graphics are about as un-hexy as you can get, the animation and sound on the Hercs is seriously 'clunky', the strategy looks as if it's going to be superbly fraught, and the fact that the whole thing is turn-based... Paff Who cares anymore?!

But now I must leave you and head for Millets where I intend to buy a camouflaged anorak and a headband, via the busiest tube I can find, naturally. And my final destination? The bushes by the toilet in $I james's Park you get a smashing view of Buckingham Palace, and a choice of either the Circle or Central Linel Oh happy dayl). Z

In the days before Doom, before Pentiums. before women even, there was but one pursuit for a grown man - Star Control II head-to-head melee, followed by long leisurely single-player seshes. David McCandless, naturally, was the best. the UberMeleeMeister if you like...

Star Control I

AY, WAY BACK IN THE MISTY dawn of PC gaming, IBMcompatibles were owned by people with slippers, yellow fingernails, badminton racquets married to small doughy women. This is the era when an 486sx25 could cost £5000 and games were golf sims or games you could play golf with. At that time the all-singing, all-dancing Sega Mega Drive was the PlayStation of the day, able to 'do' moving sprites, in colour, as well as music and scrolling.

While everyone played the piss-poor Sonic The Hedgehog and R-Type, a little known game called Star Control I appeared (penned by the equally little known Paul Reich III). As well as abysmal tiny blocky graphics, it made a terrible attempt at a Star Trekian galactic empire type simulator. It was pretty crap, all things considered. But, as a sideline, it had a sub-game called Melee, in which you grabbed two little ships (from a 'fleet' of 12 or so) and pitched them against each other. Each one had different handling characteristics and speed, a normal weapon, and a 'special' weapon, so it all became a bit like chess. Well, sort of...

(Above) Star Control III looks like it will take off from where we were previously drunkenly celebrating Earth's victory over galactic evil, but with a strange, bitter aftertaste on our tongues (which could be down to either the beer or a hint of sequel). Still at an early stage when we saw it, Star Control III nevertheless seems to be in the process of updating the graphics '90s-style and bringing in a more of a planetary, Command & Conquer feel to the gameplay.

Melee mania

Your opponent would select a big ninja ship with huge guns (queen). You'd select a lesser, crappier ship (pawn). which might be fast enough to outrun the queen's missiles - but then again might not. But the idea was to whittle away your enemy, or force it into making a hilarious mistake (ie crashing into an asteroid or, better still, its own missiles) before your puny pawn was destroyed. To make things more complicated, a planet in the centre of the playing arena created a massive amount of gravity, ladening your ships with inertia, and - if you were unlucky - forcing you to > off the planet's surface or career into an untimely 'gravity whip' which would pingpong you uncontrollably around the universe. Every time you were hit (by weapon or inanimate object) you lost members of your crew; when you reached the point where you had none left, your ship blew up. So then what? Well, you'd select a new ship and repeat the process over and over until your armada was annihilated. Then you'd punch the keyboard, scream obscenties at your opponent and storm out of the room, complaining that 'the joystick wasn't working properly'.

Hmm... well I don't think I've successfully conveyed the orgiastic thrill of Melee here, especially seeing as how we used to play it all the time in the office. It was the ultimate multi-player game. Star Control II made the melee into a class-A masterpiece, adding new ships, victory athemns and an unbelievably engrossing singleplayer game to beef up the melee action (see boxout).

You may moan, judging from the screenshots, that Star Control sported less than orgiastic graphics, but you must remember that it appeared in the days before Doom, FMV, 3D rendering and Pentium power. Star Control is tops. The best. And now Star Control III is just around the corner.

Star Control III

To be more accurate, it's probably less around the corner and more 'quite a way up the street'. The preview copy we rushed to shove in our CD-ROM drive contained most of the Melee and very little of the single-player game. Oh well. The Melee seemed very similar to its predecessor, bar the funky rendered ships and the SVGA graphics. The original 20-plus armada had swollen to an impressive 30-plus with all manner of new and exotic looking ships in evidence.

The format is basically the same one on one - but with a few added bits. The playing area now zooms in smoothly when the ships approach. rather than jerkily cutting to close-ups. Each ship has about a zillion new frames of animation so they look pretty stylish when they flip around. Network and serial/modem play is possible, and the computer opponent is still as tough as it ever was. Whether it will rise up from the past and claim joint 'Multi-player Game Of The Century' award from Doom and Quake remains to be seen, as does whether or not the single-player game will plap on the exhaustive fun of Command & Conquer. SimCity, or Settlers 2. We don't care. Star Control and all that it stands for will always have a special place in our hearts. We love Star Control and Star Control loves us. Z

Australian Rugby League

Summer's here at long last. A time for long, cool drinks, strawberries and cream, the sound of leather on willow, and... er, rugby league. Poor Patrick McCarthy, he's so easily confused.

NE SUMMER ON A VISIT TO SYDNEY, I went to an Australian Rugby League game with some friends. It didn't seem right watching rugby being played in warm, sunny conditions. Where was the driving sleet? Where was the thigh-deep pool of mud masquerading as a pitch? The torch beams to give a rough guide to where the lines were supposed to be? And the lack of warm beer that tastes of pig fat and the inside of other people's flat caps was distinctly disorientating.

Back

Apparently the game was fast and fluent, but we didn't see much of it, thanks mainly to the fact that we were sitting behind four extremely large Greek brothers who were wearing cut-down body-builders vests which, given their size and shape, was a bit like trying to fit a rubber band round a watermelon. Their collective bulk wasn't in itself a problem, but the game was obscured by their incredibly dense covering of back hair: they looked like they were wearing black angora sweaters. The game was thus viewed as if through a muslin gauze, like the sort of thing they used to use during saucy scenes in old silent movies – which lent an added surreal quality to some of the tackling.

Packers

Anyway, to the matter at hand, which is EA's new rugby league game. Although it's currently called Australian Rugby League, this is only because they can't think of anything snappier just at the moment, and it may well change in the near future. Let's face it, it's a bit like calling a football game A Football Game. Wait a minute... nah.

Go

There are all the usual options: play your way through a league or cup campaign, play one-off exhibition matches, play against the computer, a fellow human or one of the more advanced primates (or, indeed, any fellow creature on God's green earth with opposable thumbs)... all that stuff. All of the club sides involved, and every individual player, have been accurately rated using EA's usual extensive range of statistics which of course means that everything is taken into account, from tackling ability and speed, to career total of limbs broken in crash tackles, proclivity towards becoming involved in kangaroo shooting sprees, and expertise as bar staff (so that English pub sides can draft them in when they get a bit older).

Unimin

All we've seen so far is an early version, and problems with the graphics cards in our office machines has meant we've had to limit our playing time (or risk spending the rest of our lives doing an extended impression of the one with the sunglasses in Peters and Lee). But let's face it, the known universe is just crying out for a decent rugby league game (put your ear to your telescope one night and listen if you don't believe me), and EA usually come up with something worth looking at. And since rugby league is inherently more playable and entertaining than the Union version, this could well be a minor treat. As always, we'll let you know as soon as we get a finished version and the requisite viewing aids. Z

USGOLD,

UNE 1996 WILL BE WRITTEN DOWN in history as the beginning of the end for civilisation. The alpha and the omega. The end of the world and the ushering in of a new golden age. The great prophets of humanity - Isaiah, Ezekiel, Nostradamus and Russell Grant - have long foreseen this tumultuous event, the point where the very key foundations of society working, sleeping, eating, watching football, going out with the girlfriend cease to have any kind of relevant meaning as what's left of the glorious twentieth century descends into one big Quake Deathmatch

For those who were lucky enough to see and play the earlier manifestation of Quake - Qtest - the finished shareware version is light years ahead of anything you've seen before. For those of you who missed Qtest (due to death or some other acceptable excuse), Quake is far beyond anything your paltry, shrivelled, clingfilm imagination could possible conceive Read on and spooge.

What advancements does the finished what advancements does the finished quake engine offer over Quest? We've heard tell of lightsourcing and real-time shadows - is this true? What other stuff-should we know about?

MIKE: Dynamic lightsourcing is in and eally adds to the atmospheric feel of the game, but there's no dynamic shadowing, if that's what you mean. The toll on speed with dynamic shadows is too great - you can see this with some other comparable game engines which will remain anonymous.

In terms of gameplay, has the Quake character changed much? Does he now have the ability to crouch?

MIKE: No crouching - it leads to lurking in deathmatch, and this is something we strongly discourage within our own walls; it really adds nothing to the gameplay. The character is much like the one you have come to know and love, except that his amazing propensity for auto-aiming has gone, so now you really need to know what you're doing (keyboarders beware!). Also, you will occasionally see another character in deathmatch or co-op mode with his normal weapon slung over his shoulder and an axe in his angry hands: this guy has run out of ammo and should be dealt with immediately.

in some beta versions we heard the Quake character coughing his lungs up through his nose as he drowned. Are there lots of new and horrific ways to die in the final Quake?

FEATURE BNOZ DO BNOZ DO BNOZ PL

Deathmatch

The big, big, big, BlG deal with Quake is the awesomeness of its multi-player action. We don't have nearly enough space to explore it right now, but here are a few quezzies plus the relevant answers as no doubt the anticipation is driving you stark staring mad.

Will deathmatchers be able to choose between deathmatch 1 and 2 and will there be other options such as capturing the flag to expand on the avesome teamplay? MIKE: Not initially, but there will be a multi-player options board to customise your character, start a server, look for servers etc.

Will we see weapon/kill statistics at the end of each game (yea know, number of shotgun vs rocket kills etc)?

MIKE They wan't be so detailed, although you can be sure someone will back his out for you.

What do you predict will be the realistic maximum of players on the average office LAN?

MIKE: This is still up for debate. We have had up to 12 playing here seamlessly. This will only be limited by the bandwidth of the LAN.

And how many do you reckon on a dial-in server?

MIKE: Depends on the server and the modern speeds — I'd bet at least 12.

If I had a quad-processor T1 SunSpare workstation in my bedroom as a server, how many then? MIKE: Start recruiting for your blake army.

What's the deal with weapons in deathmatch? Will your current weapon change when you plek up a new one? MIKE; sometimes. This is a matter of continuous depate to both single-player and deathmatch. The weapons can't just default to the highest numbered one as most people don't want to automatically switch to a grenade launcher or rocket launcher when they pick it up. A shotgour will change to a double-barrel, and a nalignu will change to a peritorator (super naligni) et as deemed logical by our resident deathmatch experts. The other hierarchy is still being sorted out because everyone has their fiaves. Ultimately this will be configurable (like everything else in *Oukek*) to suit your tasses.

Will we still hear a tronderous beep when ammo runs out? MIKE: No, you will switch to the axe.

Will we he able to see which weapon the opponent is carrying?

MIKE: Only when it's the axe.

Will Quake be playable over the Net?

MIKE Absolutely, More playable than any action game currently in

Will Quake be playable "internationally" over the Ret?
MIKE: Not enough data to say. As always, it depends on connection speed, although it will be better than Qlest.

Will there be a function to reduce packets and/or compensate for high pings?

MIKE: Not initially.

MIKE: Indeed, and some nice messages to drive the pain home...

How will doors and secrets work? Will we still have to shoot them? MIKE: You will often have to shoot them some will activate simply by bumping into them.

Does the engine use much of the Hexenstyle scripting functions, and if so, how? What other cunning traps can we look forward to?

MIKE: Well, if I told you, you wouldn't fall for them, would you?

Certainly not your highness, please forgive our rudeness. Shall we sever an arm each at the elbow?

MIKE: No, it's okay.

Some people who ve visited your offices to check out the nascent Quake have commented on the differing styles of your level designers: Sandy Peterson, Tim Willis, American McGee and John Romero. Could you talk us through how each person's style land depraved imagination affects the layout and intricacies of the levels they construct and how the Quake engine allows them to achieve this.

white: Without going into too much detail i'm not the one to represent individual's work anyway), the way in which we've broken down the episodes to highlight each designer's look adds, a lot to the ongoing fun of the game. When you start a new episode (with the exception of the initial transitional leven to that world), you know that all the rules have changed and that you are now at the mercy of a new deranged design. American, Romero and Sandy each have their own worlds set apart as episodes. Tim Willis four newest designer) offers some fantastic levels embedded in each of the four worlds. The shareware world is comprised largely of his very smooth-flowing, exciting levels.

episodes. How will each one vary in style and setting? Will they vary in 'era' (ie will the swords and sorcery give way to a more modern tech look!? Could you briefly take us through each one? MIKE: At the beginning of Quake you will find yourself in a room with four doors. Each door leads to a different episode world - only one door (to the shareware episode) will open without registering the game. Typically (but not always), you will start off in a military level (designed by John Romero) before finding the slipgate to the various twisted dimensions of the episodes. The shareware world -Dimension of the Doomed is a sort of potpourri of levels from the various designers designed for the player to progressively discover the aspects of the Quake worlds. The very first level has instructional messages such as "You can jump up here" and Shoot this secret door" to get initiates off to a good start. It also includes a bit of an underwater area to teach beginners to swim - a crucial skill for survival in later levels.

The other three episodes take you to Romero's "Realm of Black Magic" a very dark and medieval landscape with gameplay that is unmistakably his, American McGee's "Netherworld lots of metal, traps and lava here); and Sandy Peterson's "Elder World". Sandy's levels are characterised by brilliant use of light and monster At (beware of shadowy areas); It forces you to use your brain before you attempt to use your brain before you attempt to use your brain before you attempt to use you had better know what you're doing by the time you get there.

After completing all of these, you will have access to a final level where you will confront ultimate evil and seek retribution for the hell you've survived in getting there.

There have been rumours of levels with zero-gravity settings and others that are totally underwater. Is this true, and what other architectural innovations can we

MIKE: This is true and more fantastic than you can imagine. There's no monotony in Quake.

Will we see bullet-marked walls? MIKE: Why? Feel free to stop and look for the holes if you like, but you'll find yourself looking at them sideways from the floor if you pause too long.

Explodable scenery? Waterpipes and міке: No explodable scenery - you won't want to waste your ammo, but there will be all the rest and more.

Will there be a suite of deathmatch-only levels with the shareware version? If so, are we going to see Quakeified versions of old classics like Doom 2, Level 1? MIKE: Yes, yes, and no. There will also be plenty of Deathmatch Arenas for bloodfests only - no monsters, just brilliantly designed areas code one?

MIKE: A fair slice of the editor was released by John Carmack a few weeks ago. Our editor is for Next Step so it's useless to most of the world, but we're currently porting all development tools over to NT. Whether or not the NT editor will go out is a decision that we'll probably make 30 times over before we really know.

If it does happen, will it have an inter-active 3D viewer? If not, will the 3D code be made available for amateurs to use? MIKE: See my comments above. If we don't, someone with more time for tasks like these will provide the keys network on the back of Duke Nukem. How will your QuakeServer policy work, and are you planning anything with DWANGO or perhaps someone else?

Apologies, 0 Great One. We've heard mention of a jet pack for the final version, is this true? Will any kind of flying be implemented? MIKE: No jet pack, no flying, perhaps there will be for Quake 2.

MIKE: We will offer licences for the large commercial companies (DWANGO, TEN мратн, Catapult etc) and very different licences for 'Macca's Quake Den' or whatever. We want everyone to be able to set up servers and enjoy Quake's full splendour, but we want to maintain some control over those who commercially exploit it.

Do you expect to see networks the world over reduced to super-heated pellets of metal when Quake is released? MIKE: We certainly hope so. Did I mention that we've opened a hardware.

Er, no. But moving on, will we still have the camera views in network play so that spectators can watch the games? MIKE: Not sure. It's likely to come as a patch.

Have you any idea what effect the uploading of shareware Quake will have on the Internet and service providers? MIKE: This will be interesting. We have upgraded our server capacity to a sixprocessor, 256MB server with two T3s connecting. Supposedly we will handle 2000 simultaneous connections, and I would recommend that anyone else planning to handle a lot of downloads does the same.

Quake monsters

Take a good look at the following list of Quake monsters – a long hard look. They are the enemy. They don't like you – they don't like you at all. Over the next few months, you're going to get to know them all, first-hand. It's not going to be pleasant. It's not going to be easy. But it's got to be done. One thing they all share in common (apart from a universal, determined belief that YOU must DIE) is that they're all far eleverer than the Doom heasties. These lowlifes are continually on the prowl, and like celebrity stalkers, they'll shadow your every footstep in an attempt to get close to you. You might have noticed, however, that nane of them is carrying an autocraph book. This is an QMINIOUS SIGN. Hope you like your new friends.

REGULAR SOLDIERS

Or Cernon Fodder to you anothine. These shortgun-toting goodlellas are the first enemies you'll come across (figuratively speaking) once you start playing. It takes a couple of shots before they're effectively steroed, and they have an irritating that of feigring injury only to start shooting again once you drop your goard. The swimes. Give 'em a good ripbling', I say.

DOGS

Mena best triend? Er, not exactly. Even Barbara Woodhouse would have difficultly taming these four-legged bastards. Mind you, as she's no longer with us, you're really on your own with this one. Likes: leaping from above onto your head, darting unannounced from snady corners, and bitting. Distikes flea collars, cats, anything and everything that lives.

OGRES

Pity the poor ogre, Imagins his adolescence when he gazed into the mirror harbouring self-doubts about his ugliness and being 100 per cent right in his suspicious. The subsequent lack of interest from the opposite sex has left him a big, burly, pissad-off individual who you're likely to see bunging grenades in your direction, or worse still, revving up his chansaw in preparation for a little 'organic sculpting' at your experies.

FIENDS

Very away. Flends have a tendency to spring across the room right into your able on and since they're almost twice as ugly as Ogres, this isn't what you want to see I defy you to stay calm with one of these in the room. Oh, and by the way: they're not very easy to kill either. Have fun, y'all.

KNIGHTS

One of the brainler opponents you il meet, insex knights eschew such concepts as chivalry, gallantry and nobbe conduct in favour of stenng great big sheets of flesh off your back. Just filke the Knights of yore, they tend to attack en masse, and are adept at retentlessly trailling your from room to room.

SHAMBLERS

Again, every blever opponent. Shamblers are big, scary and as unsettling as a dinner party round at Jeff Dahner's place. They think nothing of leaping from ledges and platforms if you're walking underneath, and their energy bott firepower means. you'd better have your wits about you the moment they show up Proof if proof were needed that the female of the species is far, far more deadly than the male.

WIZARDS

Justilize-Barid Copperheld, these guys can float above the ground and shoot magical stuff from their Impertips. Unlike Dawid Copperheld however, they aren't married to Claudia Schffer, a paintit emotional thora in their collective sides which causes them much consternation. And surprise, surprise - they're quing to take all that angst out on you. Still, could be worse. Given half a chance they'd probably throw you in a box and start sawing it in half.

HELL KNIGHTS

Literally the 'Knights from riell', these are stronger and deadlier than their 'normal' counterparts. Their arse-clenchingly effective energy bolt attack is incredibly hard to dodge. Try to wine 'em out as soon as you possibly can, but it won't be easy.

PIRANHAS

The beasts that put the 'ow' into 'drown'. They shimmy about underwater tooking pretty – until you get close, when they start nibbling and nashing at you like schoolkids in a Pepperami factory, Delightful

ACMINING THE

In true Night 01 The Living Bead tradition, these provide mucho gory comic relief white remaining a very real threat. Brzarrely, they attack by ripping bits off their own decaying bodies to check at you, Like in the movies, they're prefly stupid, quite slow, but a nightmare when roaming around in a group Slowing them away is very very satisfying, not to mention rather messy.

(Anove) Everything now, has a far greater sense of depth than anything you have seen before Quake kloks Duke Nukem's ass.

Military Will April 10

MIKE: If they know what's good for them!

Is Quake better than Duke 3D7.

MIKE: Technology marches on, Play
Quake and you'll have your answer.

Will Quake have the same impact as Doom on the computer games market? MIKE: Hard to say - when Doom came out there was nothing else remotely like it. I don't know if Quake will be as obvious to the unframed eye of Joe 286-pack, but it will revolutionise gaming for true gamers. A new benchmark will be set.

Will iD always follow the shareware ethos they originated? Is this the way all computer games must go міке: You know we don't like to preach or predict. It works very well for us as we consider ourselves to be perfectionists, and we won't release a title until it's the best thing out there. If your title is shit, shareware will kill it before you even get a chance to fool retailers into carrying it; too often bad product is hidden in a fabulous package for this very reason. We consider shareware to be the most direct and honest approach to marketing our products to the world - if the world doesn't like the shareware, it doesn't need to be on the shelf. If it does however, people will ask their local software supplier to carry the product or just buy it from us. Like I said, it works out very well for those with a strong product.

Will a Windows 95 native Quake be released this year?
MIKE I'm not sure; Windows 95 doesn't do much for Quake at the moment.
When Direct3D has value - ie everyone has a graphics accelerator that we need a driver for - we certainly want to be.

Quake weapons

You know, a fella can get awful tonesome wandering through all those gloomy corridors and cavernous halls on his tod. Robody's your friend. Everyone wants to kill you. What you need is a special someone who'll keep you company and give you support. And what better friend could you ask for than one of these awesome implements of destruction? Bet to know your artifiery allies because you'll need them, so shake hands, engage in a little light, blokey conversation, 'bond', and you're off. Happy trails to the both of you. Please note: Unlike the test version of Quake, the weapons in the finished game won't automatically aim at your opponents. Try to make sure you're pointing them in exactly the right direction before you let rip (unless you want to look like a complete arse, that is).

AXE

No messing here. Should you find yourself running dry of ammo, you can always rely on the axe. Nothing buts the wind or your enemies quite like the sight of you bursting unexpectedly from the shadows with your axe raised high and a look of displaced rage glowing through your retinas. It's not all minufless flailing (eithough there is nothing wrong with that)—there are different methods of use, from shuddering body blows to skull-cleaving swings at the face.

SHOTGUN

Familiar iarritory? Who cares? The shotgun is one of the most satisfying weapons in Doom, and Quake maintains the tradition—by time. Like all the weaponry on display here, it's been tweaked since the release of the first Quake deathmatch test, and is now even more fun to use. Recommended for close-up face shots.

DOUBLE-BARRELLED SHOTGUN

Double are barrels, double the fun. Knocks great big holes in the harriest of chests from way across the room. It also features a nifty recoil action and Doom 2-style reloading ammation. Not goite as fast as the regular shotgun, but who gives a flying frag? This one knils more, and that can only be a good thing.

NAILGUN

As seemin Lethar Weapon 2. The nailgun (tiring "Nine hoch Nauls", no less) is the big brother of Doorn's cheeky changun, it fires endless rounds of spikes into the bodies of all and sundry, juddering to good effect in the process. The perfect weapon for strating side-to-side down a corridor. It's rather good for putting up pictures, too.

PERFORATOR

If yac, preter your nign-speed multiple-impalation to have a little more 'comph' behind it, you could do worse than to find one of these beely devils Unleashes an awesome stream of spiny, spiky death each time you pull the trigger. And it recoils a LOT. Being on the receiving end is akin to encountering a bizarre horizontal hallstorm, albeit a lot more dangerous. Capable of cleansing densely populated areas guicker than a burst of mustagt one.

GRENADE LAUNCHER

As anyone who's seen the Quake test will tell you, these are a bundle of fun. The best thing about the grenade launcher is the way the explosives ricochet off the walls before detonating, leading to plenty of 'bouncing the shot round the corner' hi-jinks.

Of course, it's also possible to accidentally rebound one off the wall and back into your own face, but that just adds to the fun.

ROCKET LAUNCHER

these at the enemy and then sit back and watch as its sparkly trail beats a path right into their nobage. The resulting blast reduces most opponents to a ventable maelstrom of squishy red clumps. This is known as "glubing" an enemy (the "gib" referring to "gibbles", natch) - and the good news is that there's far more "gibbling" abon in Quake than you could ever wish for Messy shift.

LIGHTNING GUN

You'll need to agaster to get your mitts on this. Looking a little like sometiting a deranged Physics teacher might've knocked up in his garden shod, this one of the deadlinest weapons in the game. It free torks of lightning which, as anyone who's ever gone outside in a lin hat during a thinderstorm can tell you, aren't conductive to good health. Very fast, very powerful, and very, very difficult to avoid. Not recommended for underwater use, obviously.

(Below) The wizards are pretty mean bastards to deal with ready and will encourage it. We currently plan to port Quake to Windows 95 to the extent that it incorporates DirectX technology, but no windowsy menus and such. Those sort of bells and whistles are the reason Down 95 didn't make it out until mid '96.

Have you been smoozed by graphic cards manufacturers hoping to sign up Quake as the flagship game for their 3D accelerator card? Will iD recompile Quak to directly support any cards? How do you plan to approach this issue?

MIKE: Yes, we have had visits. The current plan (and this could change with the wind) is to release the shareware with no external support and then make it work with the Rendition Verite chip - we like this one on a cost/performance standard. As far as a general approach, whether it be joysticks, sound cards, graphics boards whatever, we usually write for one (either the best or the one that everyone has) and let that driver serve as an open invitation for other hardware guys to write to support us. As long as we continue to put out products that are highly popular, the hardware guys have no choice but to fit their stuff with ours if they wait for us to do it for them, they generally miss the boat altogether.

If you weren't playing Quake, what would you be playing (bar Doom)? MIKE: Football.

Sum up Quake in one sentence, MIKE: Hard work, patience, and the desire to do something nothing short of incredible, have paid off for the team at iD Software

Will Quake go down in history?
MIKE: Yes – unless the world ends before we upload.

Thank you, thank you, thank you. Please accept our most humble gratitude for you are, forsooth, the lords, the kings, the emperors, the rulers of the universe and all that. We will now depart and offer up our very lives so that we can be embalmed and this moment preserved for ever. Our heads will be severed and cryogenically frozen to ensure that our ecstatic memories of this event remain intact for future civilisations.

Er, okay Bye. Z

Zork Nemesis

When Chris looked at Zork Nemesis a few months ago, it was one of those occasions in the PC Zone office where the black hole that engulis his dosk was emanating certain negative vibes. Needless fo say, the Wilk. Tray man was not a happy burny; and the general level of anticipation generated by the prespect of a new Zork game was thoroughly quashed by a product that turned out to be semething of a Myst wannable.

Bucking what seemed to be a trend among pretty much everybody, we stuck our necks out and concluded that Zork Hemesis was basically a bit doll. In short, it's very much a game intended for adults, and despite its structure, we can't help but feel that American adults are still going to get a lot more out of it than English ones.

Idenvier, having lived with the game for some considerable lime now, we've since discovered has after prolonged exposure (and we really do mean prolonged – this Isn't something that's going to graft you straight sway), you do warm to it slightly. Although it suffers from a serious account of system), once you've managed to battle through and actually 'get into it', it presents some pleasant dividends.

Aside from the gorgeous visuals (which were never under dispute), it does open up and offer some rewarding and cerebrary challenging puzzles which are far beyond those found in the likes of Return To Zork. They all require a lot of thought, and the structure of the game leads to an effective denouement (cool... I've always wanted to use that word). It has to be said that as far as this type of game goes, it's one of the best, and while It's not one I'm particularly keen or I can appreciate that It's cartain to become the benchmark for this mini-genro. Maybe in future people will say, "Zork Remesis style games" as opposed to "Myst style games".

Warcraft 2 vs C&C

The great debate is still raping over which game reigns supreme in the strategy stakes: Warcraft 2 or Command & Conquer. I can tell you now that as far as most of the games journalists I've spoken to are concerned, Command & Conquer has no equal. The punters, however, seem to disagree: to date Warcraft 2 has sold 500,000 copies worldwide, compared to the 739,000 that Command & Conquer has notched up. These figures are about two months old now, but they still give you a pretty good idea of now things are going to go. Bearing in mind the fact that C&C had an eight month lead over Warcraft 2 in terms of when both names came out, you can reasonably expect Warcraft 2 to catch up with, or even surpass, C&C in sales. I awarded few coulen't move for baskethall games a few months lack. It seemed as though every software developer in the whole world had a licenced baskethall game in the pipeline or in the shops — and even Microsoft were getting in on the act.

The best thing about this however, was that most of them were pretty good in their own right. This means that either a) baskethall games are easy te program, or b) the developers obviously care a great deal about the sport and want to make their game the best.

When we reviewed NBA Live 96 from EA Sports, we scored it at 86 per cent. The reason it dish't hit the 90 or above mark was essentially due to the fact that the graphics weren't quite as good as they could have been (which is in itself tronic when you consider all.)

the fuss surrounding the fantastic new Virtue. Stadium' technology). However, NBA Live was very very) playable, simply because the Al was spet on. When you play it, you just can't help feeling that (fer once) the players in your team really are an your alward want to help you win.

Which brings me nearby outo feoiball games (or ocurse). There hear't really been much imprevement in footle Al since Sonsi, but whether this is because pregrammers have trouble developing as Al that can cope with 22 individual players (as opposed to basket itali's eight or ten), or whether it's because they feel there's no real competition, remains unclear. Every many maybe developers working on the 'next gen' of football games should take a look at NEA Live and see what they can lears.

Settlers 2

(Right) Settlers 2, twice as pretty as its predecessor. and a million times more addictive.

HAVE AN UNDYING FONDNESS FOR 'GOD sims', so I guess I should thank my lucky stars that there have been so many of them on the PC: Realms, Powermonger, Populous 1 and 2, Ultimate Domain... the list is almost endless. There's something about ordering lots of little people around that's immensely satisfying. "Build me a castle," you say, and off they pop to carry out your command. "Go and beat up those blokes over there!" you tell them, and sure enough an enormous fight ensues, with your little people scrapping away to conquer new lands for you to control.

Of all the God sims, the one that is most fondly remembered by the PC games community is the original Settlers. What a game. It arrived unannounced, unaccompanied by tedious PR hype, and the games press loved it.

To be honest, Settlers was the last thing anyone expected to see from Blue Byte, whose biggest title at the time was Battle Isle, a strategy game from the old school, complete with boring hexes and tons of statistics. In total contrast, Settlers was immediately accessible, very pretty, and most importantly, enormous fun.

So what's the scene with Settlers 2 then? Well, let me first say that I went to see Blue Byte in Germany to have a look at their sequel of sequels and I was... unimpressed.

Hey, come back you lot

Hang on a minute, let me finish. I was fairly unimpressed with Settlers 2 when I first saw it because (surprise surprise) it looked suspiciously like Settlers 1. What I'm saying here is that from what I could see on the screen, it looked like the original game, but (and it's a big but) I hadn't actually played it. Well, I have now, and I'm happy to report that Settlers fans are in for an absolute treat.

This is mainly down to the fact that Blue Byte have ironed out some pretty serious problems that were apparent in the original. For example, if you've played it you'll probably remember thinking it was pretty fab up to a point,

In perspective

Ultimate Domain is criminally underrated (and for my money better than the first Settlers game). Settlers 2 is simply fab.

Settlers 1

Ultimate Domain

but after a while the levels became somewhat repetitive. This was down to the way the game was designed; your objective in each level was to capture a set amount of territory, or blast your opponent to bits, and hey presto, you'd won. This was fine while you were getting used to the way everything worked, but after that boredom set in. Settlers 2 has a new campaign option with an on-going storyline which I guarantee will keep you interested right to the very end. Also, because each level has various mission objectives which you need to complete before you can 'win' the level outright, the game is much more varied than its predecessor.

Another problem with the original Settlers was that the interface could be confusing. The sequel has a new and improved interface which is easy to get to grips with and lets you access all the game's features in an instant, as well as pop-up windows to help you monitor different aspects of the game. The upshot of all this is that Settlers 2 is much more playable, and has greater long-term appeal. I became impatient with Settlers 1 after a day or two, but this hasn't proved the case with the sequel.

Settlers 2 has many useful new features. although they're not necessarily groundbreaking. The roads, for instance, get bigger the more people walk on them, eliminating the congestion problem seen in the first game. There are packhorses that move stuff around faster too. As well as that, there's an observation window which you can keep on screen displaying a part of the game area you want to keep track of your fort at the frontline, for instance – so if you're attacked you'll know straight away. Having said all that though, the game is not without its problems.

Road to success

Simple stuff like building roads is still a pain in the arse. Before you can start making one you need to make sure you've got a flag at the points where you want it to begin and end. Assuming there's no problem with the surface in-between, the computer will build the road for you - but if there is a problem with the surface, you'll see a line from the first flag showing which directions you can begin construction. Bit by bit you start to build your road, following the lines, hoping you will make it to your destination flag. Sometimes you get there, and sometimes you don't. Frankly, this is complete bollocks Why can't the computer just build the damn thing without you having to mess about with little pointy arrows for bloody ages?

Another criticism is that you can't directly control your soldiers.

Admittedly, you can tell the game how strong you want your frontline to be, and whether or not to use your best soldiers as defence and so on, but if you want to do something simple like move your prime troops to where the action is, you're out of luck. Let me give you an example; my nearest enemy was getting a bit too big for his boots (he started having a pop at the guards protecting my borders), so I thought I'd give him what for. Unfortunately, I couldn't move the soldiers in the centre of my territory to the frontline. But then I had a brainwave - I'd demolish the guardhouses, which would free up the soldiers inside, who would no doubt rush up to the front to help their mates.

I went ahead with my plan and, sure enough, out popped the soldiers. Imagine my utter astonishment when the little bastards walked not to the frontline, but all the way back to a bloody storehouse I had miles away from the action. I nearly lost it completely at this point. My best men were getting clonked left, right and centre by those bastards in the red (er. the enemy), and there was nothing I could do about it. Okay, you can get round this to a certain extent with extremely careful planning, but the fact that you can't control your soldiers directly remains a fundamental fault in the game's design. To be honest though, none of these niggles are a major issue. Actually, they don't really matter at all. Why? Because the bottom line is this.

(Above Use boats to move cargo to and from your various colonies, and to go on expeditions.

Help!

I can't stop playing this game. I've been totally engrossed for days and days. It's ruining my life. I'm losing all my friends etc. I hate to admit it, but I even took the bloody thing home last weekend. Except I didn't. I thought I'd taken it home, but when Saturday morning came around I opened the co case only to discover that my shiny platter of joy was missing – yup, I'd left the actual disc in the office. I was pissed off bigtime and was left with no choice but to go out and have a real life instead.

However clichéd it may sound, if you liked Settlers 1, you'll love the sequel. It's bigger (the levels are huge), it's pretiter (it's even more hi-res than it already was) and it's more addictive than ever. Hurrah for good old-fashioned playability and yah boo and stucks to interactive crap thingies. Or something, 2

Paul Ditta (new bloke alert! New bloke alert!) managed to curb his first-time reviewing nerves, only to find that he'd been landed with a decidedly uninspired beat 'em up. Better luck next time Paul...

ray For Death

(Right) Here we have another fine example of MegaViolence™.

HE GRIM REAPER, LONG ON SCYTHE, short on skin, has decided to hold a tournament wherein a selection of unsavoury individuals will fight for the right to overcome death itself. The contestants, a downright motley assortment of stiffs, banished gods and disreputable deities also have their own agendas, ranging from destruction of the universe to simple redemption.

There's a wide range of characters. among them Painbringer, a US martial arts robot who looks like he's slumming it from Rise Of The Robots, and Cthulhu, a dark god inhabiting an outer dimension just waiting to sink his tentacles in to our world. Then there's Uriel, a fallen angel who looks like she's stepped out of Celestial Baywatch, and Jan Fun, a thirtysomething oriental master of martial arts who died in the early '70s under mysterious circumstances after enraging traditional Grand Masters with his unorthodox ways.

There are nine characters to choose from and you fight the others one by one before you meet yourself in combat and move up to Pain, a nasty individual (I'll leave it to you to discover why he's been given this rather imaginative moniker). Should you survive, you'll find yourself face to face with the big guy himself for the final battle.

But it's tough luck for any joystick jockeys out there - control is via either the keyboard or a gamepad, although they can be configured and are fairly straightforward (four keys for movement, two for kick and two for punch). However, on the graphics front Pray For Death fares quite well, with some impressive scenery and well-implemented water effects, although I did notice that the backgrounds tended to shift slightly in time with the movement of the characters. For what it's worth (and it's not much), the intro is beautiful.

Déjà vu

Now I don't know about you, but I think I've seen something similar somewhere before, but I can't quite put my finger on it... ahhh okay, you've got me, I can -Pray For Death is basically Mortal Kombat with corpses and demons. The game structure is the same, even allowing for a couple of frills (such as a tag team mode, among other things).

The main problem is that there's nothing in Pray For Death that we haven't seen before; you can do combos and unique attacks but there aren't any particularly vicious moves to perform on the other characters. It's all been done very competently, but it doesn't · really have you dribbling from orifices in the same way as, say, MK III.

I didn't hate Pray For Death by any stretch of the imagination, but at the end of the day most of us have limited funds, and if you want a cracking beat 'em up there are better titles on offer. If, however, the mere mention of 'beat 'em up' has you thrashing around in a pool of your own juice then give it a go - but don't say we didn't warn you. Z

Having spent a pile of dosh buying Cyberia 2, you are rewarded with the opportunity to save the world, a feat you'll probably have accomplished in countless other PC games before, so you should be pretty good at this sort of thing by now.

At the start of the game Zak (your alter-ego) reawakens from a cryogenic freeze. He quickly discovers that he's been captured by the FWA (the manual doesn't explain who this Fwa lot are. presumably Virgin couldn't think up a suitably world-dominating-type name to go with the acronym). This is pretty bad news for Zak: he's lost his freedom, his cool-looking spaceship, his selfrespect and, worse still, his hair. Your objective then, with the aid of your female sidekick Novelle, is to help Zak get away from the evil FWA. Anyway, enough of this world-saving bollocks already, let's get back to the matter in hand here (aka the game).

I'm sure you know the sort of thing, Just in case you don't, here's the gist of it: clutch your mouse or joystick, move the cursor round the screen 'clicking' on enemy thingies, marvel at wonderful, wonderful backdrops that impress all your friends and reassure you that you did the right thing buying that costly Pentium machine, solve a few easy puzzles (Cyberia only), and generally delude yourself that you're a dab-hand at computer games because you've completed the thing in a day or two.

Die, Die a lot, Die often etc

I have to admit that I wasn't exactly kirking people out of the way to get at this game – I saw it at beta stage in LA and was less than impressed. Okay, the graphics are absolutely amazing, but the fundamental gameplay shows no great improvement over the original.

Firstly, the biggest single problem with the first game is still there: during the walkabout sections you can expect to die approximately every 30 seconds. Is this fun? Methinks not. I'll give you an example of the sort of profoundly frustrating (and pointless) problems you'll come up against... I was walking down a corridor with my gun at the ready. I spotted an enemy guard, who didn't see me. I thought it might be a good idea to shoot him, but the game thought differently - every time I went to fire at him, he turned round and yelled something like, "Hey you, stop!" and then... I died. Shit. What was I doing wrong? I could see this bloke who couldn't see me, yet he managed to shoot me every time. I eventually discovered (after spending ages arsing about with the same scene) that the way round it was to walk down the part of the corridor that the guard couldn't see, timing my movements so that they corresponded exactly with his. What's the bloody point in that? Why couldn't I just blast the bastard?

Generally speaking, the walkabout bits involve wandering around, taking a wrong turn, and dying. There are a few puzzles thrown in to break the monotory of dying all the time through no fault of your own, but ultimately it's a fatal flaw in the game's design that you're constantly punished for no reason.

To make matters even worse, I seem to remember that the adventure sections in the first game were bad for the same reason, but not this bad. Fortunately though, there's another side to Cyberia 2, a much more friendly side, a side that doesn't wish to frustrate and upset you, a side that you could safely put your hand on your heart and call... fun.

My kingdom for a mouse

The arcade sections in Cyberna 2 look a lot better graphically, and they're much longer too. Apparently a lot of people preferred the arcade sections in Cyberna 1 to the adventure sections (funny that, people preferring fun over instant death) so the game's designers decided to lengthen the arcade bits. So what you get now is not the quick blast you had last time, but a long and very pleasurable ride through beautiful scenery, and lots and lots of enemy nasties to put an end to.

It all sounds pretty fab and groovy, but if you played the original you'll remember it was sometimes a bit of a nightmare to control the crosshairs on your weapons. Not this time though, because you can now aim and shoot your weapons with a mouse. This makes the arcade sections an absolute joy to play. It's a bit like Operation Wolf (a top game on the Amiga about two thousand years ago) except that the graphics are gorgeous. There are new ground-based sections too, which are very similar to those in Rebel Assault 2 (and for my money, they're better too).

So why am I scoring this game lower than Rebel Assault 27 Well, I'm afraid that the shite adventure bits take a lot of the fun out of an essentially sound game. Fortunately though, the arcade bits still make it worth recommending. 2

Indiana Jones PC And His Desktop Adventures

Rob Tribe wanted to be an archaeologist. He even went so far as to get an archaeology degree. For now though, he has to make do with playing Indiana Jones in computer games – and the only old thing he gets to see is his gran, once in a while.

HERE I WAS, WRITING A FEATURE for Philosophy Today about existentialism in the modern world when I remembered that Zone had thrust a floppy disk in my hand and said: "Hey Rob, if you have some spare time between Cannes and writing the sequel to Seven could you have a look at this? It won't take long, it's like a little adventure thing that sits on your desktop and every time you need a break, you see if you can solve the simple puzzles." Well, I had just finished a particularly difficult passage on the omnipotence of David Duchovny and needed a mild diversion. After thinking about Gillian Anderson naked for about an hour, I decided to boot up this 'little adventure thing' and see how long it took my superior brain to complete Indy's first challenge - I reckoned on five minutes

Six hours later I'm screaming at my girlfriend, "Look, how can I come and eat when I haven't found out how to get the pole to power the raft across the sea, to find the obsidian key so I can unlock the inca pyramid?" To save me from starvation, she sat down, took one look and said "Why don't you move that rock?" "Oh yeah, the rock that I have tried to move 1000 times with absolutely no success, you mean that rock?" "Yes," she said, as she dragged the rock halfway across the screen to prove the point.

Whippy-dee-doo-dah

It was at about this time I thought I should re-analyse my thoughts about Indy's Desktop Adventures. For a start, it is not an adventure game in same sense as Indiana Jones And The Fate Of Atlantis. You are presented with a small world, an objective and a few hints. Then it's up to you to explore, find useful objects, do battle with spear-chuckers, Nazis and snakes and generally solve puzzles. The puzzles usually take the form of finding special objects, trading them for more useful objects and finally using these to complete your task. When complete, the world resets with more devious puzzles - so bang goes any idea of just playing for a little while, 'cause once you're in, it's very, very addictive.

At least there are many hints available so you don't have to pull your hair out for hours on end while trying to figure out Indy's latest poser. Of most use is the map (which you should find as soon as possible): this shows you the whole world – where you have been, where you need to go, where the puzzles are (these only show up when you have visited the place in question), which ones you haven't (when you click on these squares you also get a handy hint on how to solve the puzzle) – plus where all the useful teleport sites are located.

One other factor that makes Indy's Desktop Adventures very playable is that it's almost impossible to die. If you hate fighting, then you just turn down the skill level and everything dies far more easily. If you do wander down the fighting path, whip in hand, and come off slightly the worse for wear, then you just have to go back to the starting point and see your friendly neighbourhood pharmacist, who deals in strange and exotic herbs that make you feel a bell of a lot better.

The one gripe I have about fighting is this. Although you can move in any direction, you can only fight horizontally and vertically – trying to shoot something diagonally is not allowed – so where is the most popular place for people to attack you? Diagonally! It's hardly fair, is it?

After you grasp the format, the games are simpler to understand, so in time it may well become just a diversion. For now though, I dare not switch on my computer for fear of seeing yet another evening (and my wildly exaggerated social life) slip into a timeless blackhole of archaeological related adventures.

Thanks LucasArts, this is what I needed to ensure I never do any work again. Z

The Gene Machine

Long, long ago Duncan
MacDonald had a Saturday job in a tacky clothes shop called American Graffiti.
Opposite American Graffiti
there was a Boots Chemist.
Before the Boots Chemist was installed, there had existed a jean shop called Jean Machine. This made
Dunc the ideal (etc).

VER SINCE I CAN REMEMBER, LucasArts have led the field in point-and-click adventures. They invented them, after all. (Or was it Sierra? Damn! Suddenly I'm not so sure!) Okay, so let's put it like this then: LucasArts invented the excellent point-and-click adventure... and everybody, from that day on, has been copying the basic format (while trying to improve on it at the same tume, admitted!w.)

Along the way there have been some laughable failures, but, also, some pretty near misses. For instance the French had a good slant on the genre going for a while, way back in the days of Monkey Island 1, but, as is the Gallic wont, they kind

(Below) A typically Jules Verne-Ian steam rocket, Cool. of ended up drifting off into a limbo of weirdness. We (the Brits) never even had a slant on the genre, and just produced cack basically: carbon copies so weak in concept, scope and presentation that I suddenly want to stop talking about them. (You notice that I mentioned no names? Well, I'm nice like that.)

Get up to speed, dude...

Sorry to bog down the beginning of this review in this wanky retrospective manner, but there's a point to it all if you'll bear with me a moment longer. Erm... so where was I? Oh yes, I'd just mentioned Monkey Island 1. A class act. Indeed, at the time, the magazines all said, "LucasArts can't better this". But they did. The sequel was fantastic.

software contender, Sierra, was beavering away with their own set of love 'em or hate 'em titles.) Anyway, at the end of the day (and I think we must be talking about something like five years ago) LucasArts struck triple gold with Indiana Jones And The Fate Of Atlantis, a point-andclicker which, to my mind - and believe me, I'm no nostalgia freak - hasn't been bettered to this day. And not even by LucasArts themselves. Day Of The Tentacle was too 'problem heavy' (and American studenty); Sam And Max was a hoot, but lacked general coherence; Full Throttle was too short. And on and on. (I didn't mention The Dig because of the involvement of Steven Spielberg, and to my mind he should be strung up from the nearest electricity pylon for crimes against the cinema - and for his beard.)

But this isn't a LucasArts game...

Yes, The Gene Machine isn't a LucasArts game. But you know something? More so than any British point-and-click adventure game I've ever seen. The Gene Machine has come the closest to emulating the un-eclipsed brilliance of the aforementioned Indiana Jones. (However, I'm not saying it's as good, you understand, I'm just saying that it's pointing in the right direction.)

So what's pointing correctly then? That's a hard one. First I suppose you've got to deconstruct Indiana Jones And The Fate Of Atlantis. Then you've got to compare its components to those of The Gene

I suppose the ideal starting point is the storyline, and with Indiana Jones, as you'll know, it was your quintessential Boys Own stuff: the 1940s; Indy, a chick sidekick, a missing artefact; a totally mad scientist and some Nazis. All the interaction and set-pieces were right across the board, and the locations were abundant in the extreme. The Gene Machine, on the other hand, is far more insular. Far more British. The unlikely hero is a 19th century minor toff called Piers Featherstonehaugh (pronounced 'Fanshaw'), whose sidekick is Mossop, an ineffective manservant. The front end of the game sees Fanshaw and Mossop being visited by a talking cat – the result of a gene splicing experiment conducted by (yes) a mad scientist. The mad scientist (who lives on an unchartered island) is intending to create an army of gene-spliced creatures with the aim of taking over the world.

There's the quest. Find the island. But first you've got to somehow get hold of a ship (à la Monkey Island). Cue visits to your social-climbing fiancee's house; to a seedy london pub; a museum; Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace; an HG Wells style inventor; your 'Gentleman's Club'. And a couple of other places, all placed firmly within the boundaries of london. Apart from when you visit the moon, that is. Or when you find yourself in... but I don't really want to give too much away.

So now for the storyline comparison: Indiana Jones And The Fate of Atlantis was a non-stop roller-coaster ride. The Gene Machine is more like a roundabout, with the odd rollercoaster moment.

To call Indiana Jones And the Fate Of Atlantis filmic would not be telling a lie. Using cut-scenes to full effect (without over-using them on any occasion), and placing 'camera positions' in just the right places, it struck the perfect balance between game and movie.

The Gene Machine doesn't fare too badly either. It's not half as polished, admittedly (or when you get right down to it. not even a quarter as polished), but with its large, clear characters and beautifully rendered 'guachey' backdrops, the atmosphere just positively oozes.

And The Gene Machine is a talky too. Indy came out before the advent of CD-ROM, and was text-based. (I think a talky version was eventually released, but unfortunately I never saw it.) The Gene Machine, however, is obviously a talky through and through, and it tends to talk for the most part with the voice of John Pertwee. This is because Fanshaw is played by Sean Pertwee (who speaks in EXACTLY the same tones as his dad). It's like a posh Worzel Gummidge, bordering on the John Hurt: and the delivery is great.

As I said, it's John Pertwee! (Except that it's Sean, you nonce - Ed)

Ah, the puzzles. That means we've finally arrived at the most subjective question in the universe. Is a puzzle hard? Or: how long is a piece of string? To my mind, The Gene Machine is on the easy side - but then again I prefer that the early locations open up quickly due to the fact that a spade tends to be a spade rather than a radio, Know what I mean? It's like a quick crossword as opposed to a cryptic crossword. But it all comes down to your own preference, doesn't it. To be honest with you, I'm a bit thick, which is why I like adventure games to sort of spell themselves out. Still, I suppose that if I were forced to make a generalised statement covering the requirements of everybody, I'd have to come down again on the side of "The Gene Machine is quite easy". It suits me, as I've stressed, but maybe I won't be saying quite that once I've finished it. (It took me eight solid hours of studious gameplay to complete a third of it.)

But I haven't mentioned the interface yet... Indiana Jones had an extremely visible one. The Gene Machine's interface, on the other hand, is mostly invisible, but it does have an annoying flaw, which I'll come on to in the final paragraph.

But I only read final paragraphs...

Hello final paragraph readers, you were expected - join the party for a précis. Ready? Here goes. The Gene Machine's got a great HG Wells/Jules Verne style storyline, some lovely graphics, very British humour (which will make you smile rather than laugh, though), and an interface with a problem: your inventory box appears whenever you touch the bottom line of the screen with the cursor, meaning, in practice, that it appears about every five picoseconds. (Unless you're extremely careful with the mouse.) The right mouse button, however, is virtually unused by the game engine, which will make you wonder why it wasn't assigned to inventory trigger duty in the first place. Strange.

Nevertheless, I can't accuse The Gene Machine of not being fun. Or is the word I'm looking for 'absorbing'? Hmmm. It's a bit of both, actually. (As I said at the very beginning of this review, it's like a LucasArts game.)

The Muppets are without doubt a classic product of modern culture. John Davison dons his Kermit costume and immerses himself in all things Muppet to see if they have successfully made the break into games.

The Muppet co-ROM

CAN'T ACTUALLY REMEMBER IF THERE'S ever been a Muppets game before. I think there must have been at some point – an educational doofer or something. Anyway, regardless of this, the Muppets have arrived on the Pc. A potential non-starter if ever there was one, this is the sort of licence that needs its producers to be very careful...

after all, arse around with duff-looking sprites and crap sampled sounds from the Tv series and you'd almost certainly end up with a load of tripe.

Thankfully Starwave have done an admirable job. They've teamed up with Jim Henson Productions to film loads of new Muppet footage to integrate into the game, along with video and audio clips taken from the series. The result is a very slick multimedia-style product that manages to deliver all the characters, all the sets... and all the humour.

So what makes it a game?

Okay, so there's loads of video – eek! Does that mean it's going to be a bit knob then? Well I've been in two minds ever since I started playing around with it. Basically, underneath a highly polished presentation lie seven fairly simple games. There's a bunch of quiz things, a game that's very similar to Missile Command, a 'shuffle the picture' affair, a 'guess the power and angle of the gun to hit the target' thingy and finally, a very simplistic Doom rip-off.

Okay, so none of the games stand out as the patient fantastic, but once "Muppetised" they become completely and utterly hilarious. The Doom rup-off 'stars' the Swedish Chef and the action itself is pretty cack – put simply you're just trying to kill different vegetables, but the fact that he's muttering 'hurdy-shmurdy-burdy" in the background makes it one of the funniest titles in computer game history.

This is why The Muppet CD-ROM is so compelling... if you love Muppet humour you'll adore this. It doesn't matter that the games aren't what you'd call brilliant - it's the fact that the whole thing is so full of quips and witticisms that you just keep playing.

Unlike many similar multimedia affairs, it rarely repeats itself either. Even the installation system is entertaining... as it starts it suddenly hangs, and you become convinced the whole thing's crashed but, just as you're about to hit the reset button, Fozzie and Kermit appear and proceed to take you through the most hilarious options system ever.

In short, it has to be said that this is a game that Muppet fans can't afford to miss. It can be tailored to be either an amusing (if simplistic) game for 'grown ups', or into something eminently capable of holding the attention of your average pre-teen. Z

Fire Fight

ORMALLY WHEN I'M REVIEWING A game I make notes on a scrap of paper. "So what?" you may say. Well, what generally happens is that I lose the bit of paper, and have to rely solely on memory (not my strongest point). On this occasion, however, I'm able to quote directly. My scrap of paper survived intact, for more than 24 hours!

This is my first scribble... 'Asteroids, Desert Strike, R-Type, C&C'. I think what I meant is that Fire Fight isn't that far removed from ye olde pub fave Asteroids - you've got a rotatev ship which packs a fair bit of momentum once thrusted, and you shoot things. I wrote down Desert Strike because it's isometric, R-Type because... er, actually I can't remember, and Command & Conquer because Fire Fight (in lo-res) looks similar-ish (at times).

My next scribble says this... 'Flargs versus Zoogs'. In other words there's some silly plot in which one bunch of people (or aliens) are fighting another bunch of people (or aliens). And then... 'Basic cannon, small homing missiles, plasma gun, big homing missiles, powerful cannon that makes your ship recoil, explodey grenade thingy'. That, obviously, was a list of the weapons, which you 'own' from the start. Ammo is gained by flying over the relevant icons which are released (again obviously) by whatever you blow up.

Next? '16 levels? Poo! Link-up could be a crack though!' Again, fairly self-explanatory. It took me five hours to get as far as level eight (at which point the game was reaching bastardo status), but there are also eight specialised levels for multiplayer skirmishes; this is all very well for Americans (seeing as they're all networked/wired/both), but not so brill for us average British scum, non?

Onwards, onwards...

'Smart pyros and boomies.' Um, cool explosion graphics and so forth. 'Radio chatter nice at first, but not later. Why not random?' Ah! Right! The barrage of radio chatter from your base gets annoying when you're restarting (say) level six for the umpteenth time. For example, there's an explosion and the person who triggered it (your mission was to drop him off) says, "I enjoyed that." You think to yourself, "Oh no, that really crap actor who's supposed to be me will now say 'someone had to' in that ultra annoying monotone mogadon voice." One pico-second passes. "Someone had to!" says valium man. Blaaaargh!

'Nice radar system.' Yup, and so simple, too. Your ship is surrounded by a circle (see screenshots). Off-screen enemies are represented by white blips which each get brighter as the individual enemies approach. Bearing and distance. Hooray!

Moving on, here are a couple of notes in succession... 'A slight jerk to the scrolling', 'Slowdown on bigger levels'. The maximum 200MB install would probably sort these two out, but I decided to go for the more realistic 20MB (on a P90 with 8MB RAM and a quad-speed drive).

Well, you know what's next. Yes! More notes... 'Samey.' 'Confusing.' 'Samey' is a reference to both the graphics and the gameplay: by level three you've pretty much got the gist of things, and by level five you'll be having the odd déjà vu (Above) "Smart pyros and boomies." Erm... that's cool explosion graphics to you and me. (Fire Fight is like Terminal Velocity in this respect). 'Confusing' is down to the nottoo-superb pseudo 3D - some things can be flown under, some over, and others you bump into, but which is which? That's the question!

That's all folks!

Anyway, here's the final entry on my scrap of paper... 'Car boot sale'. I think what that means is that if you picked Fire Fight up in a bargain basement for a tenner, you'd be laughing. But in the harsh light of day, and talking mainly about the one-player game, Fire Fight lacks 'oomph', 'intrigue', and, ultimately, 'length'. It's a multi-player game at heart, I suspect, with a single-player mode tacked over the top - something we'll be seeing more and more of as we move into 1997 and beyond. 7

No, Duncan didn't

Total Mania

(Right) Nothing like a brisk walk in the fresh country air. With a gun in your hand.

Bereft of inspiration for this introductory preamble, Charlie Brooker hit every letter on his keyboard in sequence... Qwertyuiopasdfg hiklzxcvbnm. And ves, he does get paid for this.

HERE ARE CERTAIN THINGS IN LIFE that are guaranteed to have you tearing your hair out by the handful and praying to any god you care to mention, regardless of your religious affiliations, Here, in no particular order, are the three most frustrating things on Earth: 1) Affairs of the heart

This encompasses everything to do with love: from the slow painful descent into bitter recrimination that marks the end of a long relationship, to the consternation generated when trying to work out whether you're unrolling the condom the right way round in a dark room. 2) Hot Saturday afternoons There's nothing on the telly, the sun is shining and nature is doing its utmost to lure you outside, but for some inexplicable reason you can't be arsed to do anything, even though you're slowly being driven insane by boredom. 3) Things that don't fulfil their potential This applies to loads of things, from million-dollar football players who unexpectedly lose their form, through to movies that are utterly fantastic and then have a really shitty end. And guess what? It also applies to Total Mania, the new combat-cum-strategy game from Domark.

Bit of a curate's egg, then?

Exactly. As you can see from the screenshots, Total Mania looks like it's going to (Bight) The Total Mania crew get locked in until they've finished tidving their bedroom.

Total Mania has more than one this, in common with Origin's Crusader. For a start, they're both isometric, real-trin combat games. They both feature heavily-armound, gun-alinging shatin'il c warriors. And in both games the main protagonists are clad from head to be in bright red clothing.

Now this 'red' business is qui baffling, if you ask me. Bright red armour is not the sort of thing you want to find yourself wearing during an undercover sabotage mission. Everybody can see you coming a mo off, So why wear it?

The only explanation 3 can think of is that the programmers think it looks cool. In which case – why end there? Since the use of red armour already leopardises the safety of the combatteam, you might as well go the whole hog. Give 'em sunglasses, perhaps – really dark once which you can barely see through. Or why not make them wear rollerblades, so they can 'in-lim' state' their way into trouble? Better yet, give one of them a hulking great 'boombox' blaring out a selection of thresh punk classics.

Okay, okay — so what if the enemy can hear and see you from ten miles away, and you can't see properly and keep falling over — at least you'd look cool. And that, after all is what really counts.

be a great deal of fun. Indeed, it's rather like a sort of cross between the X-COM series (which deserves a place in any self-respecting games collection), and Origin's real-time isometric kill 'em up, Crusader. It's got smart cyborgs, loads of different weapons to choose from, and bloody huge explosions which knock holes in the walls. Nothing wrong there,

The graphics are pretty good, too plenty of crips yoch action, and a highly impressive 'zoom' function which lets you get an even better look at the onscreen shenanigans. Every character is represented by a detailed rendered model, and there's smooth animation to accompany each move you make. Nothing wrong there, either

So Total Mania really ought to be a winner – only somehow it isn't. And the culprits? Well, the AI leaves more than a little to be desired; your cyborg team tends to exhibit the route-finding capabilities of a small child accidentally separated from its parents in a large department store, seemingly content to wander aimlessly this way and that before heading vaguely in the right direction.

Worse, the action itself, when it does occur, is curiously uninvolving; this is down to the fact that you have to use the mouse to control your movements, with the result that the whole thing degenerates into a fairly aimless shooting session. And finally, there's the level design, which falls into the trap of too much tedious orienteering and too little strategic manoeuvring.

It's a great shame – it seems fairly obvious to me that Total Mania really Patrick McCarthy once came home to find his whole family wearing shell-suits. The resultant psychological trauma means he has to spend a fortune on psychotherapy. Apparently there's a recognised medical term for his condition.

Shellshock

S IMPOSSIBLE FOR A COMPUTER GAME to be deliberately hip and trendy. A game that tries to be hip and trendy always ends up getting laughed at, whereas a game that arrives at hip and trendiness will do so by accident rather than design. Shellshock tries extremely hard to be hip and trendy. And everyone who walks past the machine when you're playing it laughs at it - and by association, at you too. Being laughed at is something most people try to avoid, apart from those so desperate for attention of any sort that they'll take whatever they can get - politicians, and minor TV 'personalities' and the like. Playing Shellshock isn't much fun. You have to keep saying stuff like, "Shut up. I know it's shite dialogue. I didn't write the bloody stuff." And everyone laughs again. (The Muppets, on the other hand, doesn't really try to do anything very much, but is extremely hip and trendy indeed. Nobody laughs at you when you play it. And it's fun. Can you guess which game more people in the building are playing at the moment?)

Everybody's doing it

Shellshock is from the people who made Firestorm: Thunderhawk 2 Everyone who makes a helicopter game makes a tank game. (Above) Ah, Bosnia. The rolling hills, the babbling brooks, the chatter of small arms fire...

(Right) Is this (a) A very big bush, (b) A very big pixelly mess; or (c) An exploding tank?

a geezer called The Man, who's had his voice slowed down electronically so it sounds like James Earl Jones. They're very cool indeed and to prove it they use funny words to talk. They're all "characters" - for example, the one in the spare parts shop is supposed to be slightly scary, and the one with the hankie on his head sounds like Huggy Bear after two cylinders of nitrogen.

As part of your role as the world's milk monitor, you'll travel to trouble spots in your tank and shoot the shit out of anything that moves. Among the countries you'll be visiting are the Rwanda-like 'Muwanda' and distinctly Bosnia-ish 'Mostvia Somethingstupidsta' – presumably because the developers couldn't get the official licenses.

Snore doggy dogg

The game environment is one of those pseudo three-dimensional affairs, where instead of just clicking on an option, you 'visit' different rooms to do different things. Game controls are accessed by climbing into your tank, saved games are kept in lockers in the anteroom to the briefing area, extra weapons and stuff are in the workshop area, and so on. Unfortunately, each of these areas are also inhabited by members of your team of gangsta-rap muthas who are extremely keen to talk with you and may well, on occasion, even... er, diss you (apparently) - but not until they've bored the arse off you first. For a bunch of hip and happening dudes, these people are among the most boring on earth. They make day-time TV presenters seem punchy and straight-talking.

Typical

A typical mission goes something like this:

- Avoid talking to bloke with silly name next to your tank who wants to lampoon your record collection.
- 2) Go to spare parts room.
- Buy stuff for tank (more armour; A-Z road map of Vietnam; sweets for glove compartment).
- 4) Ignore attempts at tedious rap-talk from spare parts man with silly name who wants to tell you the hood on your parka's on back to front.

- 5) Avoid talking with man in basketball court with silly name who wants to talk about what an arsehole you look in your new hi-tops.
- 6) Go to briefing antercom.
- 7) Listen to two of your 'homeys' talking about something which illustrates what fully rounded personalities they have.
- 8) Wake up
- Go into the inappropriately-named Briefing Room.
- 10) Listen to anything-but-brief discourse on the history of the country whose landscape you are about to devastate.
- 11) Listen to an even more lengthy and eye-wateringly dull talk from The Man, which manages to combine bland platitudes with tedious pseudomilitary speak.
- Lose consciousness, falling face-first onto the keyboard.
- 13) Wake up in your tank in Muwanda with RTYUIFGHCVBNM imprinted backwards on your face.
- See something in the distance.
   Shoot it.
- 16) Shoot everything else until 'mission' ends or you get blown up.
- 17) Go to stage 1.

No matter what situation or country you're supposed to be in, the mission is just a lengthy bout of blasting at stuff with your limitless ammo (except when you'll occasionally be asked to pick up hostages, or deliver some pizza, or something). Like Core's helicopter game, some piffling little object like a ship or a battle tank has a tendency to suddenly appear in front of you like it's popped out of a cake, and disappear if you reverse an inch or two.

I know it's only supposed to be a bit of light relief, and not a major tank simulation, but even as an arcade blaster it's just boring. You end up trudging about, shooting at stuff as soon as it registers on the sights, picking up power-ups (which you then have to pay for in the spares shop even though you found them) and looking at the scenery which, no matter where you are, looks remarkably similar - pixelly. Then doing it all over again, nominally, somewhere else, It's got a network option - but frankly, who gives a shift? X

Euro 96

Since our premature review of the Euro 96 beta in the June issue of Zone, Gremlin have been busily beavering away to resolve many of our criticisms. However, despite their best efforts, Patrick McCarthy finds that many of the gameplay problems still invoke the red card.

URO 96 IS. IN ESSENCE, THE SAME game as Actua Soccer except that some of the gameplay faults that plagued the first version have since received some attention – while others have been ignored. Two new teams are available in the shape of Croatia and Turkey and the total number has been reduced from 40-odd to the 16 that are all playing the Championship. In terms of ways to play, you can play through the proper Euro Championships, with matches taking place in the HÛrO 96 England proper grounds, on the proper dates (which is when you get the intro spiels mentioned later). If you get bored with that, you can re-draw the groups or amuse yourself with friendlies. And there's the Wireplay option too. BT's new facility for playing over a phone line (this is something we're going to play and test in a later issue – keep an eye on our On-Line pages for this and other Wireplay-related issues).

REPLAY GOAL-LIMI

New stuff Thankfully the goalkeepers are now more likely to save a low shot, whereas before they were too busy being beautifully animated, with the ball hitting the net while they took a stylish dive. But they still occasionally let soft goals in, casually watching long lobbed passes fall into the net, presumably on the grounds that the shoot button hasn't been pressed and so therefore the ball constitutes no danger; they also seem to experience problems when running out of their goal (see Best foot forward on page 76).

The game runs faster, although like pretty much anything these days you will still need a fast Pentium to run it satisfactorily in hi-res mode. It incorporates the speed-burst button from the PSX version, but unfortunately this doesn't work in conjunction with a slide tackle: it interprets this as pressing both buttons at once, and as a result changes control to another player. You can still use a normal tackle but we find this too slow, the opponent having disappeared downfield by the time your motion-captured leg moves to get the ball - you're often more reliant on pushing players off the ball than tackling. In our opinion this is far too dependent on the relative abilities of the players to be satisfactory, particularly if you have the weaker side and you leave yourself open to getting a card.

The formations bear more of a resemblance to real life. You'd think though, that having produced some good football management games in the past (ie Premier Manager 3), someone could sort out the default numbering into proper positions - fullbacks at 2 and 3, and so on. We've found that when players are played out of position, it doesn't have as big an impact as you'd expect. You'll notice it if you stick a defender up front, but swapping players around at the back makes only a negligible difference. Having said this, we've also found that players with the greatest pace can be played to good effect in virtually any position.

There's a new feature (similar to Striker) for dead-ball kicks which offers more control over the ball's trajectory, but the camera angle doesn't alter to frame the action as it should, so you still find yourself lobbing the ball hopefully upfield. You can change it manually, but it's a lot of fuss. Once you've sorted out your trajectory you are offered no opportunities to alter it, and this also hits a high score on the annoyance scale.

Sound-wise there's a lot more sampled commentary, with some speciallyrecorded introductory spiels for games played in the real-life Championship. And as you'd expect, this only enhances the atmosphere further, and it's this element that makes Euro 96 stand out as a proper game of a specific championship and elevates it from being just any old ordinary footie title.

Style over content?

It seems that more attention has been paid to superficial graphical elements than to basic gameplay. Yes, the Euro 96 stadia look fab, but as far as gameplay is concerned, what's crucially missing is a way of controlling the goalkeeper's distribution once he's made a save. such as at a dead-ball situation; instead you have a choice of either a short pass or a long kick out into midfield with no actual control over the direction. What you do get are extra bits of (admittedly very nice) animation instead: players stretching their hamstrings and bending from side to side in the pre-match line-ups, for example. While you didn't get such treats in Sensi (obviously, as the crappy little sprites were only about four pixels high, or

There are many problems which still need to be worked on, and some of them have been inherited from the original

Looking (and sounding) good

Euro 96 undoubtedly looks better than Actua Soccer. For starters, Gremlin have accurately researched and recreated the dimensions of each of the stadia used in the tournament, and they've thrown in a preview option too that shows you a swirry pic of the venue so you know what it will look like. There's also a facility that lets you scrutinise each team's (and individual player's) record and stats in some detail so that you can compare different members of the squad. The menu system is now much easier to use, affhough it's still got one or two very annoying little quirks (for example, before every match the team selection reverts to the default, so if you don't want Pallister at right back and Rednapp on the left wing, you'll have to change it every time you play a friendly).

The commentary by Barry Davies is even better than it was in Actua. As well as there being more off the cuff comments, there are quite a few specific Euro 96 introductions, all of which helps add to the sense of occasion. The player select facility is a nice addition, as is the pace button, but they still don't work as well as they might. Set pleces have also been revised, so now instead of just banging it up the pitch as in Actua, you got at dotted line to help you aim your shot. This is a fine idea, but once you've set your trajectory you can't reduce it.

The final score

I'm not going to harp on about the good and bad points of Euro 96 because Patrick's already covered just about everything in his review. However, having looked at the game in some considerable depth, I'd just like to say that I am suffering from a severe case of déjà vu. Why? Well, it's rather simple: the more you play this game, the more problems you encounter. I seem to recall having the same dilemma with another product. Himmm, what was It? I vaguely remember that it was called something like... Actus Soccer. Yep. that's the one all right.

To you, our readers, I say this: buy this game only if you're prepared for the frustration of finding problems with it weeks, even months down the line.

Diona Andreson

To say that this game has caused a fracas in the PC Zone office would be something of an understatement. mags as well), it would be safe to say that Euro 96 is one of the most disputed games we have come across. The problem, I think, is that it should have been absolutely unbelievable — just look at it — superb graphics and the licence for the biggest sporting event in the last 30 years. So why wasn't it fantastic? Why did it fall down at the last minute? Why are we all rowing about problems and gameplay quirks? You can play this for a while and everything seems fine, but then all of a sudden it his you with something ludicrous, like offering you the ability to make a man stand behind your opponent as he's taking a throw in or... Oh I dunno, it's just plain't staking a throw in or... Oh I dunno, it's just plain't staking a

We wouldn't actually give any footie game a wholehearted recommendation, but if it had to be a choice between Actua and Euro 96 – for the fiver or so difference that you'll find at retail, the new game is the better of the two. Probably.

John Davison

Gremlin have created a monster. They've managed to put together potentially the best-looking and playable football game for the PC ever (gasp!), but when it comes to the crunch they've failed dismally. And as all gameplayers will shout in unison, the crunch of any game is the Al (artificial intelligence).

I could almost gloss over some of the 'problems' reported elsewhere in this review (the 1000 minute games, the dubious off-side decisions, the fact that players play out of position etc etc) if the Al was a significant improvement over Actua. Unfortunately though, Euro 96 is still as antagonistic as ever. Player selection is still very confusing and the one-touc facility is just bizarre: players leaping for a header will often power the ball towards their own goal rather than go forward; a striker will get to a goal, kick ahead of a defender and then hoof it deep into his own half; a throw to the keeper will often result in him kicking it out for a corner or conceding a dangerous opposition throw. The list is endless. Essentially, the more you play Euro 96, the more you find wrong with it. And we've played it a lot.

Once you start wising up to its shortcomings, it is playable. But essentially it's left down by its Al which we find hampers the gameplay – and it's that aspect which makes footle games. Such a shame.

Actua Soccer. The substitution facility is best described as unusual: you have to wait for play to start before you can ask to substitute someone, after which you have to wait for it to stop, even if half(Below right) "It's behind you! No... No... over there."

time occurs in between, Sadly, once you've brought another player on you can't move him within a formation once he's on the pitch. The "intelligent" passing system hoofs the ball miles downfield when you want to tap it to someone next to you, and gives it to an opponent when you're aiming straight at one of your own players. We feel that the one-touch system fails almost as often as it works, button presses often carrying over to the next player and being implemented in unexpected ways. Also, unless you manually control the direction in which the ball is played, you'll often find that you 'one-touch hoof it' off on the wrong bearing. This often proves difficult during play, and nor is it explained fully in the manual. The ball bounces off the back of your player's legs, shoulders and arse when he makes no attempt to control the ball. It's not a very pretty sight.

Camera angles in wire view change so that you have to constantly adjust your direction when shooting, rather than assuming – like every other football game in the world – that you'd be clever enough to want to do it at the goal, and letting any joystick movements choose

Problems

Like the previous versions of Actus Socces (PC and PlayStation), Euro 96 suffers from all manner of problems, some of which are irritating and others which are amusing – but all are utterly idiculous. Here are three of our favourities:

 A game went to sudden-death extra time; someone scored but the teams played on. Eh?

Someone was called offside direct from a corner.

There was a penalty shoot-out after a drawn game and after extra time had been played. A penalty went in off the post. The commentary said something to that effect, but then suddenly changed its mind, attering something along the lines of, "Ooh, and it's hit the post and gone for a corner." Astonishingly, the players then moved up for a corner, the computer took it, and the players played on afterwards, completely ignoring the penalty shoot-out. We played on... and on... and on (in shifts, in the end), and after 1050 minutes we were still playing. It was 22-8, and most of the players appeared to be dead, in spite of the fact that many were still at 99 per cent fitness. And this didn't just happen the once but twice, in different games, under different circumstances. Oh dear.

which part of the goal. [Except for those occasions where you're given a free kick when you always have to pull backwards regardless of the direction you're facing. Logical? No.) Player selection hardly ever seems to give you the player you want. And so on and so on.

Essentially, this is Actua Take Three (if you include the slightly tweaked PlayStation version), and in terms of gameplay they're still no nearer to getting it right. If Gremlin had leapt ahead and fixed most or even all of the Actua gameplay problems, it could almost have been forgiven for being a standalone product. But, where it's basically only the scenario that's seen any significant changes, it may have fared better if it had been released as a data disk instead. Z

(Below) Once the CyberJudas has made his move, you have to start looking for clues to his identity. You do this by snooping around your advisors' offices, prying into their secret drawers and reading their diaries.

T WAS A COMPANY CALLED IMPRESSIONS that first introduced me to the idea. It was a game called Breach 2 that first made the concept a reality. It was a system called IGS that first showed me the hidden potential that lies within different computer games. The Interlocking Games System was an idea that would allow two different computer games (more should they become available) to work together, making a larger whole. Rules Of Engagement 2 was a starshipbased strategy game that would call upon the ground-based combat gameplay of Breach 2 whenever the appropriate situation would arise within a mission. And naturally, both games could work independently of each other

The concept was staggering but unfortunately only evident in two much-overlooked games. I gather that Maxis are experimenting with something similar for their next-generation Sim titles, but as of now, the IGS is the only time such a concept has seen the light of day.

Why am I telling you this? Has Cyberfuldas reinvented the concept? Are Empire on the verge of unleashing a torrent of interlocking games to an expectant public (ie me)? No, but I couldn't help thinking that Cyberfuldas would make an excellent 'central hub' for a whole raft of other games to work around. Before I explain myself though, I'd better > describe CyberJudas to you - otherwise you won't have the faintest idea what I'm talking about (What's new? - Ed).

About six or seven years ago, the Commodore Amiga and the Atari ST were blessed by a strange little game called The Armagadaon Man. One of the unique aspects to the game was that it came with a free magnetic.

wall chart depicting a map of the world and a large sackful of magnetic stickers to allow you to chart the progress of the world's trouble spots. Your job was to ensure that the world continued to thrive and prosper and that the various governments of our planet didn't get out of hand. All very strategic, all very complex, and all very similar to what we have here.

You're in charge of the world. That is to say, you're the President of the United States, but that never stopped them interfering with everyone else before. Sitting in a weird cybery control seat, you're apparently hooked up to something called the Shadow Network, an interface that allows you to access any country in the world and deal with them on any level from social to economic to espionage to military. Form trade agreements, increase diplomatic tension, negotiate peace settlements, lob a few nukes. All the fun of real-world politics in the comfort of your own home. And it's all frighteningly realistic too. If it can happen on Newsnight, chances are it can happen in here too.

That's only one side of the game though. You can play it as a straight political simulator, or you can have the added tension/fun of having to root out a traitor in your midst. One of your six presidential advisors (all of whom are also jacked into the Shadow matrix) is out to overthrow your authority. He wants you out, dead or, er, out. And to this guy (or gal) the nations of the world are just his playthings. Pawns in his game of political chess. Mere tools to be used in his garden of intrigue.

Now this is perfect fodder for me. I love conspiracies. I'm a conspiracy nut. I'm a kernel of suspicion within a shell of doubt. I watched JFK twice. And nearly understood it! Thus CyberJudas is perfect at pushing all the 'What The?' buttons that line my brain, There's not really much going against it to be honest, which is why I started

(Left) The Event Vortex is another curio. You can use it to jump back and forth in time and examine the various actions that different countries take against each other. If you have the right manpower you can even influence them

(Far left) Your advisors are on hand to alert you to potential trouble spots and point you in the right direction. The only trouble is, they're all out for themselves and so you can't afford to show favouritism. If one gets a bit jumpy. you can assassinate him. Cool.

(Below left) This is the screen where most of the action takes place. From here you can check on a country's military spending, examina their political allies and lob a nuke into the team that beats you in the Olympics pondering on all the potentials for ways the game could be even better. For example, when you commit espionage on a country, you could load up Spycraft and do it for real (well, you know what I mean). Or if you decide to invade Mozambique, you could load up Command & Conquer and run the battle. That kind of thing, CyberJudas practically screams 'central hub' to me. It's that kind of game. Or rather it should be. but due to the inability of the world's software houses to see beyond their own front doors, it never will be.

But that's bad journalism

I shouldn't criticise Cyberludas for being something it isn't. What it is, is a very playable political sim. It isn't perfect. The pacing of the game jumps between being numbingly slow and utterly swamping you with information. It's also not for everyone. It puts me in mind of an old Chris Crawford classic called Balance Of Power. Global strategy set in the real world. If the word 'politics' sends you into a coma, then forget it. Go and play Duke Nukem or something. Those of you who have a general interest in the world at large might just find something here of interest, though. Z

Oh, how my heart leapt when I spotted this title. A platform game starring a paraplegic, perchance? Or maybe a Doom-clone in which you endlessly beat up children and OAPs? No such luck. It's referring to a military 'offensive' - specifically a whole load of 'offensives' undertaken during World War II. The game is a kind of limp, isometric take on Command & Conquer. For some reason your troops can only move in a minimum group of four, and they mince around the battlefield in such an effete manner that the whole thing looks a bit like 'The Rockettes Invade Poland'. There are several neat touches - the option to play as the bad guys for one, and the way you're practically encouraged to kill horses, sheep and harmless civilians for another - but since all the action drags along at a pace more commonly associated with the average sea cow, it ain't much fun.

ADDICTIVE COMPILATIONS

Publisher: Prism Tel: 0181-804 8100 Price: £19.99

Prism have been around a while, but are a new kid in budget label town, and are possibly leaving themselves slightly open in opting for the name Addictive. Unfortunately they haven't thought to give names to each compilation, so we'll have to call them Compilation A, B and C. Each has an okay game along with a couple of ropey ones. And as for what strange hybrid human personality each is supposed to appeal to, that's anyone's guess.

COMPILATION A

Features the extremely naff International Sports Challenge. Now's your chance to beat your trusty joystick to a pulp by diving, showjumping, cycling and swimming, then lanse into catatonia running the marathon - what bloody cretin thought of that one? and finally enter the shooting. Preferably with the inventor of athletics sims as the target. Campaign II slows things down like a litre of Benylin. It's a wargame, and as wargames go, a good one. (Insert jumper/elbow-pads/ pointy helmet joke of your choice here.) Shadowlands is a little bit like an underground, RPG-based version of Syndicate (but not as good). Make up a party of four people, shove them about in the isometric depths, grow long fingernails and slay stuff, even having your scarily-named characters wander off separately if you want. It's officially Not Bad.

COMPILATION B SCORE 60

This one has Pacific Islands, which was once considered the cat's slumberwear in tank simulations, but now looks about as visually advanced as the Bayeux Tapestry, It also has Empire Soccer 94, which is one of the 6000odd unimpressive football games currently out there. But it also has the original and engrossing Robinson's Requiem, a weird, first-person viewed survive 'em up in which you've crashed on an alien world and have to stay alive and healthy by utilising your wits, your comprehensive range of prescription drugs, and your hand-to-hand combat skills. The only game ever to give you the option to amoutate your own limbs, it's quite interesting, but not without its faults.

COMPILATION C

includes one mediocre effort, Ishar 3 (travel through the portals of time in pursuit of Ye Dragon of Sith, make DIY spells with Twerp Root and Spittle of Lobster, etc) one corker - Silent Service II (atmospheric sub-aqua shenanigans in submarines) and one blatant filler, known somewhat optimistically I reckon as the Collossus Collection, which includes backgammon, bridge, chess and draughts games for those of you who long for the good old days where families made their own entertainment and there were songs you could sing along to.

MAXIS SIM TITLES

Publisher: Maxis Tel: 0171-505 1500 Price: £9.99 each (TBC)

Moving on from budget compilations... In advance of their plans to take over the planet with a fully interlaced series of new Sim titles, Maxis have decided to release all the old ones at bargain prices.

Sim Earth sees you struggling to control the planet, striving to balance ecosystems and pursue ecological programmes - and you aren't allowed to mention it without including the word Gaia. Sim Farm is basically Sim City, although here you're well and truly getting your hands dirty (theoretically speaking) ploughing, sowing, reaping, and fiddling about in cow sheds. Sim Life is fun with microbes. (Will they evolve beyond the single-cell organism stage? Or will they continue to find ITV's Euro 96 football coverage enlightening?) Sim City is the original game that spawned a monster, looks really ropey and everyone already has a copy of somewhere, so who they think will buy it now is anyone's guess. And Sim Ant - well, it's stretching a point somewhat, but was interesting in that it was almost responsible for a whole new creepy-crawly/viral infection sub-genre (apparently Sim Tse-Tse Flv. Sim Pubic Lice and Sim Ebola Virus were put on the back burner). Of the whole bunch, Sim Earth is probably the only one with anything still going for it. Z

Ultima Underworld in space: big, first-person perspective viewed adventure, with total freedom of movement, loads of weapons and hours of fun/fear.

Alone in The Dark Collection

All three games for less than the price of the new release, which is virtually the same apart from the graphics. Bloody hard though.

Essential Collections: Flight £34.99 1942 Pacific Air War, Fleet Defender F14 and Wings Of Glory: three decent flight sims for the price of a pint.

Essential Collections: Business £34.99

Transport Tycoon is Sim City 2000 for the transport industry, and Theme Park lets you make children sick. Excellent!

Essential Collections: Sport £34.99 PGA Tour 486 is a superb golf game. F1 Grand Prix is the original version of the outstanding racing game. FIFA Soccer is okay, too.

Space Hulk £11.99

Gripping strategic gameplay requiring a great tactical mind and a cool head.

Strike Commander £11.99

Refreshingly straightforward arcadestyle flight sim with decent graphics and loads of longevity, thanks to the inclusion of the extra missions.

Formula 1 Grand Prix £14.99 Ideal if you want the classic racing game, but don't want the other stuff

in the Sport Collection edition.

Indiana Jones And The Fate Of

extra missions and speech packs.

Syndicate Plus £11.99

All of the original missions, plus the add-ons, on one CD. Extremely addictive strategic shoot 'em up that gets bloody hard later on.

Privateer £11.99

Wing Commander type space-based dogfighting, with Elite-style trading sections. Comes with extras and speech packs.

Sam and Max Hit The Road

World Of Combat £29.99

Outstanding compilation: top chopper-sim Comanche: Armored Fist, its tank-game equivalent; and gripping sub sim Wolfpack.

Aztech Waverider Pro Typhoon AW32 PnP

(Right) Try but two eew cards? Oh, okay then a any excuse for a sesh of Duke Nukem 3D. To really get the most out of your games atmospheric sound effects and thumping music are essential. Dave Mathleson takes a look at two budget wavetable cards that promise to rid gamedom of weedy bleeps.

an exaggeration to say that the invention of the SoundBlaster (and to a lesser extent the Adlab) was responsible for transforming the Pc from a boring office machine loved only by stiffs in suits to the fab multimedia all-singing really-rather-good games platform that we know and love today.

(Below) The Aztech – well worth a look

in the beginning...

Although the arrival of the original SoundBlaster was a welcome step forward in sound technology, its 8-bit sound effects and basic music chip were still unable to provide 'cinematic' sound. Sound cards have moved on since then: today's products now boast 16-bit digital audio, while on the music front things are quickly turning wavetable.

Wavetable chips generate music in games by using sounds based on samples of real instruments, with the obvious result that they sound loads better than their predecessor, the FM chip. Up until recently wavetable with the result that anyone using them purely for playing games could find that they're paying for features that they're not going to use.

But sound card manufacturers seem to be wising up to this fact, with the release of more basic models that are release of more basic models that are still kitted out with wavetable chips, but come without extras such as on-board sample xAM. Both Creative Labs and Gravis have stripped-down versions of their cards, and there are quite a few other manufacturers following suit.

The price is right

Weighing in at under £100, the two cards on test here are obviously aimed at games players - but they're also endowed with extra 3D surround wave effects processors to help tart things up. The rather snappily-named Aztech Waverider Pro 32 3D has all the usual bits that you'd expect from a card:

SoundBlaster compatibility, IDE CD-ROM interface and General MIDI sounds. It's not properly Plug and Play compliant, in that it doesn't have a chat with your BIOS and sort out its own IRQs, but installation is pretty simple and IRQs, addresses and DMAs can be changed through software, so there's no horrible jumper fiddling.

The Aztech performed very well, with cards have been considered a little bit posh (ie expensive), and to fully appreciate the benefits you've needed a high-end card such as an AWB32 or Gravis UltraSound to go with it. As well as that, they've been designed with the musician in mind,

32 3D

Bundled with the card is an additional utility that brings the built-in 3D surround effects into play; to my ears it didn't really make that much of a '3D' difference, although it did add clarity (which

I suppose adds to the 3D effect).

If you're a musician the Aztech has less to offer. The sounds are standard General MIDI, but you're stuffed if you need anything else as there's no WaveBlaster connector or RAM slots for your own samples. However, it does come with full duplex drivers for the digital audio, which gives you the facility to playback and record at the same time.

The Typhoon AW32 PnP (hmm... I wonder how they thought up that name?) costs the same as the Aztech, but differs mainly in that it's Plug and Play compliant. This can be a pain if your system has devices attached that aren't PnP (known as legacy devices to techies), but you can get round this problem by changing the settings in software. The wavetable sound quality of the Typhoon is on a par with the Aztech, and to be honest it's largely a matter of taste which of the two you prefer. Having said that though, the Typhoon provides a slightly better digital sound quality in Windows than the Aztech, and is equipped with a WaveBlaster connector.

Musicians among you will probably find the Typhoon the more appealing of the two. although really anyone considering a card for this aspect alone would no doubt opt for a more expensive model anyway. All in all it's extremely hard to differentiate between the Aztech and the Typhoon - they're both good value for money, and offer sound quality that'll make any decent game kick. So if you're sick of having crap sound or no sound at all, why not treat yourself? After all, there's no disputing that the price is definitely right.

Diamond Stealth 3D 2000 'computery', developers use texturemapping and various types of shading

3D graphics may be the best thing since sliced bread, but they mean hard work for the poor old PC. The flat, lifeless Dave Mathieson has a look at Diamond's new Stealth 3D card to see if it really can take you into the third dimension...

HILE PCS HAVE COME a long way in establishing themselves as the best all-round platform for games requiring a bit more than a well-oiled trigger finger, your good old designedfor-blokes-in-suits PC can't compete graphically with a decent console. Although a Pentium has plenty of power for most tasks, the 3D graphics featured in all our fave games prove particularly taxing for a chip which is more suited to adding up endless columns of financial data.

There are three main elements of a typical 3D blast-fest's graphics that the PC finds especially hard work. The first is the model itself; for example, those massive canyons in Duke Nukem aren't real at all, they're just a clever piece of hi-tech wizardry. Okay, I know I'm being patronising here, but it's not simply a question of the PC scrolling the game's levels around in tandem with the movements of the joystick, as it does with 2D graphics. This is down to the fact that the game map is stored as 3D data, and has to be transformed into 2D before being displayed on-screen.

Exactly how this is done varies from game to game, but suffice to say, it's dead hard. Some games have better engines than others, which means that the programmers have sussed out a way of doing the transformations in less steps, but even the best game engine will eat up all the power you can throw at it.

The other two elements concern the process of making the graphics more realistic. As flat polygons look dull and to tart up their models. Texture-mapping involves wrapping a 2D bitmap around a 3D object (such as the walls in Doom), and the more detailed (and therefore less blocky) these are, the slower the game. Shading attempts to 'illuminate' objects so that they look more realistic; most games use the Gouraud technique which delivers good results for the cost involved.

Take It away....

Installing the Stealth 3D is simple; plug it in, insert the CD, and bingo! There's obviously sod all point in having one of these beauties if you have nothing to play, but demo versions of Descent 2 and Destruction Derby are supplied with the card. Destruction Derby seemed to have a Windows DLL missing or something, but Descent worked a treat, and on an old P90 the graphics were very impressive. Not only did it run perfectly smoothly in 640x480 mode, but the textures passed the 'blocky close-up' test with flying colours.

Stealth 3D 2000 really scores is in its abilities as a normal graphics card. The Edge 3D, Diamond's earlier attempt in this market, was flawed in that while its 3D abilities were great, it was pretty poor as a conventional graphics card. Fortunately this has been rectified with this latest model, and at this price anyone considering buying a standard graphics card would be well advised to spend a bit extra and plump for the Stealth 3D. As long as developers can be persuaded to write for it, I reckon Diamond have a real winner on their hands. Z

The purpose of this brief lecture in computer graphics is to illustrate why svga games usually look crap on anything less than a P120 - and even then, the quality isn't exactly on a par with Ridge Racer. Fortunately, several companies have been developing cards with chips specially designed to speed up the 'hard things' I've mentioned, among them Diamond, who have now released a 3D version of their well-known Stealth graphics card.

The Stealth 3D 2000 is designed to completely replace your existing graphics card, and comes complete with all the usual Windows accelerator functions and nos compatibility that you'll need to do 'proper' work and play your old games. But it's the 3D chipset which is of the most interest, as it's capable of processing 3D data at a much faster rate than your CPU. The only drawback is that it's designed to work with games that have been specifically developed for it, so don't expect any miracles with your existing titles.

A decent graphics card and 3D for this price is a real barg.

Vivid 3D Plus

The Vivid 3D Plus promises convincing 3D surround sound from just two speakers, but does it work? Well, it had Duncan Swaln looking over his shoulder as he delved into the deuths of Doom...

OW THAT MULTIMEDIA HAS

Bax of tricks

The Vivid 3D Plus promises 3D surround sound from only two speakers by using sax (Sound Recovery System) technology, which is a sort of pseudo surround sound. According to the manual sax works by "retrieving important ambient information lost by traditional stereo processing" and doesn't require preencoded material to do so – in other words, the Vivid 3D Plus fiddles around with sounds and frequencies to play various acoustical tricks on your ears and will work with any ordinary mono or stereo signal. As well as beefing up the sound fancy tricks and filtering added. There are also dials for volume, centre level and spatial effect which will vary the amount of effects the signal generates.

We tested the Vivid 3D with Duke Nukem 3D, Doom and Raptor, and there's no denying that it did actually enhance the sound effects and music. It's hard to describe exactly what it does, but everything seemed louder than it did using the bypass option, and the sound effects were more spread - grunts, growls, drips and ricochets appeared to be coming from either side rather than just straight ahead; Doom, in particular, definitely proved more atmospheric. You may not be fooled into thinking that one of those walking wart hogs in Duke Nukem is standing behind you scything your legs off with a chaingun (much!), but you may feel a bit more nervous taking on a fearsome horde of cacodemons on your own in a dark bedroom with the windows open and the curtains flapping.

> One minor gripe is the fact that the Vivid 3D Plus supplied to us came with an American two-pin plug attached to the power supply, which meant that we had to go out and buy the necessary adaptor before being able to use it. But apart from this, and bearing in mind that fifty guid is a fair amount to spend on a gadget that's not strictly necessary, the Vivid 3D Plus certainly manages to bump up the scare factor of your average shoot 'em up. Being such a caring sharing bunch, we put consideration for our readers before our telephone bill and dialled the Web sites of some of the biggest games companies. We then had a quick debate and awarded them a score based on the following...

LOOKS

Yeah, yeah, a page may well be Netscape 2.0 enhanced or have an entire Java 3D virtual world tucked away at the back somewhere, but if it looks completely plop, or like it's been put together by a first year student, what's the bloody point?

POPULARITY

A hits counter on-site is important, as it tells you how many other people have visited it before you. Are you being sadly unique by going there, or are you just sheep number 401235? A lot of commercial sites don't have counters because their maintainers (often paid huge sums of money by clueless execs) don't want to tell their be-suited ubermeisters the real truth - that their site is getting somewhere in the region of 'nada' hits. Some sites sport a logo to say they've been picked as one of the 'Top 5%' Web sites.

LAST UPDATED

Again, another key feature often absent from commercial sites. Some companies treat Web sites like white elephants (if you'll excuse the metaphor). The initial tidal wave of 3D-rendered enthusiasms and content and ideas and all that stuff dries to an incontinent trickle within three weeks. The site then remains the same, unchanged for all eternity until it's found by a primitive post-apocalyptic civilisation who bases their religion on it.

WHO ARE THEY?

Rather self-explanatory really, but sometimes it's not so obvious.

WHAT'S THERE?

Easily the most important element of a Web site is content, a fact which oddly enough seems to elude most companies. A lot of them are guilty of abject cyber-twattery, or worse, pathological pedestrianism. A couple have obviously come across a formula whereby you jam in the following sections:

- Main menu
- Press releases
- A Latest games

- Tips and FAQs Staff roll call
- Very little else

Plus maybe - oh the innovation!

- A 'live' video camera trained on a corner of the programmer's office (why? why? and thrice, why?)
- An on-line shopping area (for US Webbers only)
- Something which sounds unbelievable but is permanently 'under construction'

The sad fact is that most sites contain nothing you couldn't glean from an advert or a two-page magazine article - and probably less.

Every games company and their monkey seems to be going for a no-holds barred, oh-boy oh-boy cor blimey Web site o-rama to make their presence felt on the mighty Internet, Sometimes spending vast amounts of money... sometimes not. Sometimes well thought-out and packed with innovative. interesting content. Usually, not. So if you're in the mood to check out the latest info from your fave company's Web site, here's a swift little quide to what's a hit and what's... you know...

LOOKS

Very very nice looking, with a bit of Netscape 2.0 enhanced guffery and copious use of the new 'Quake' font. It's a bit on the large size though, with some pages weighing in at well over 100K, although a less shiny text-only version is available.

POPULARITY

You probably wouldn't be called a 'dildo' if you thought that this site was popular, but as far as we could see the sheer number of digits involved is not apparent on any of the pages.

LAST UPDATED

Er, recently. But not that recently.

WHO ARE THEY?

Er, hello? HELLO? If you don't know by now who they are you really are being a dildo.

WHAT'S THERE?

Hate to say it, but it's quite disappointing actually. The majority of the content from the file archives has been mirrored a quillion times on a zillion other sites, making a visit to this homepage for downloading rather silly and somewhat unnecessary. Unfortunately, most of the cool and really exciting sounding bits—namely DeathMatch Maker and Shopping Maul (ho-ho) – are currently 'under construction', which means that you have to content yourselves with the pedestrian bits.

There's a rather sketchy set of bios for the iD team which includes useless snippets of information such as the fact that Jay Wilbur drives a Ducatti, and that Adrian Carmack ate at Taco Bell constantly for three months.

Cool sound departments - Hot New Stuff & Killer Games - lead to bare press releases and the odd nouvelle screenshot.

VIRGIN INTERACTIVE

LOOKS

Functional and marginally stylish. Lots of scanned game logos and that funny plastic typeface everybody's using these days. Nice 'watermarked' white pages.

POPIILARITY

Not a clue. Probably not stunningly high since this is a UK company.

LOST UPDATED

Dunno. Seemed to be quite recent but there was no way of telling.

WHO ARE THEY?

Virgin Interactive, games playing arm of the Branson group (whose other interests include airlines and pickle). Responsible for distributing to us Doom 2 and Command & Conquer (cool), Rather unfortunately, their site is a little tricky to find. A search for 'virgin interactive' produced (this is all true!): Virgin Models, Virgin Girls Cum Cum Cum, Why Virgins Are Better, Asian Virgins, Interact With Our CUSeeMe Virgins, The Church of The Virgin Mary, Virginity: The Sacred Chasuble, Amateur Virgins, and then - in very small letters - Virgin Interactive UK. (Incidentally, we reckon we deserve recognition for the selfdiscipline we displayed in not ignoring the Virgin Interactive site and browsing through the rest of the list instead.)

WHAT'S THERE?

The usual stuff. Screenshots and info on their up'n coming games, especially the latest Capcon signings, Interestingly, this seemed to be one of the only games sites to support the Internet Blue Ribbon campaign – a protest against the Communications Indecency Act currently been poked through the US Congress (see last issue's On-line). All the blurb on the page was quasi-official press release toned, but they did list all the customer support e-mail addresses. Z

Neil Lennon

(CHAMPIONSHIP MANAGER 2)

We know what you're going to say. Neil Lennon isn't a computer game character, he's real (although some might say that it's Championship Manager 2 that's real, and that Neil Lennon's a computer game character). In what's laughably known as Real Life, the boy Lennon is a talented young player (with ginger hair) of the sort usually described as 'an exciting prospect' – and that's exciting as in 'good', not as in 'full-on chubby', fact fans in 'GMP Douveler'.

fact fans. In CM2, however, he's something else entirely.

It's simply a case of buying him and sitting back and watching him score a million goals, notch up another million assists, get the captaincy of Northern Ireland, marry Madonna and get made Pope. It's a bit like having Pele, Best and Cruyff rolled into one and playing for your team. Post CMZ Patch, you have to lure him away from Leicester, which is problematic, but he still goes about his business like a man possessed once you get him. Other pretenders to his Perfect Purchase crown, mere striplings such as James Cardona, Peter Smith, Goran Vucevic and Hoisa Morran, have shown themselves after extensive research to be occasionally fallible, with form varying to the extent that some managers have even had to Let Them Go. Yer man Lennon, on the other hand, is nothing short of a dyed-in-the-wool demigod, maintaining form across the gamut of saved games, regardless of team or manager, and we want his belly-button fluff for a new magical suit fabric. Buy Neil Lennon and Good Things Happen. (© The Lennon Marketing Board.)

(SAM AND MAX HIT THE ROAD)

A gravel-voiced dog with a '40s suit and a nice line in B-movie style dialogue, and an unhinged rabbit sidekick with enormous fangs and a penchant for sudden violence. What person in their right mind could fail to love them? (Apart from anyone on the receiving end of one of Max's problem-solving assaults, that is.)

TEATURE TO SOME OF THE TOP TO SOME OF THE TURE

(COMMAND & CONQUER)

First of all, we'd like to make it clear that it isn't funny or clever to be a homicidal maniac. We want you to know that it isn't especially cool to strangle people with your bare hands and jump up and down on the bloated stomachs of their stiffening corpses in hobnailed workboots. But somehow when this geezer, this bloke's bloke, does these things for you, you can't help but admire him. "Pop over there old man," you tell him, "and just take out those four armoured personnel carriers for me, would you? Using only a packet of Parma Violets and a Swiss Army knife (camper's model)," And humming a merry tune, off he goes to do just that. "Run down the road there and blow up that military base, would you?" you might ask, "Here's a sachet of Kiwi shoe polish and a match." And off he goes again, earning your undying love and respect. "And that was left-handed," he'll say when he returns, and you'll love him all the more for his casually homicidal humour. Eventually, you tell him to do something so ludicrous that he gets killed. And do you mourn him?... Nah. He's a bit of a bastard, isn't he?

(PHANTASMAGORIA)

You know, the one who went on to get a part in a 'proper film' (as if Phantasmaboria was a game). Actually, only Jeremy loves her, but we thought we'd give her a mention in case she's a regular reader. He's available any weekday after 6pm, from now until May 2070.

(GABRIEL KNIGHT)

(TERRA NOVA)

Never has a voice been so sexy as the chick who tells you what to do in Terra Nova. There are some in the office who claim that Eva in Command & Conquer matches her in the honeved vocals department, but the true cognoscenti know better. It's a voice that manages to combine intelligence, scorn, disinterestedness, and yes, the promise of dirtiness, in perfect measure. When she says "Installation complete" your mind reels and your heart develops arrhythmia. Pathetic, sad, woeful... but true. And we don't even know her name (sigh).

(DISCWORLD)

He's played by Eric Idle, he's very funny (it helps if you like Monty Python and Terry Pratchett). and he's also the best thing about the game. He's so entertaining, that he makes you want to carry on with a very difficult game that you might otherwise give up on.

(MONKEY ISLAND 1 AND 2)

He looks like a geek. He wears poncey clothes. He's not the brightest person you'll ever control in a computer game... but he's still funny, and you actually end up caring that he doesn't get hurt, which is quite an achievement on the part of the designers. Bless.

My name's Guybrush Threepwood, and I want to be

Who we love

(DESCENT 2)

What's the point of having something that's supposed to go off and find secret passages and stuff, then come back and tell you about them, if it doesn't also tell you that, although there's a nice little weapons cache hidden in a cosy nook, there are also 5000 homicidal robot-killing machines having an old-school re-union right next to it? None.

11ate

The Goalkeeper in Actua Soccer

(ACTUA SOCCER)

Who, as everyone knows, plays like a quadriplegic with impaired vision, who's been injected with opiates by one foreign betting syndicate and is taking bribes from another, has lost the will to live and sees little point in the ultimately pointless pursuit of football in general and goalkeeping in particular, given the state of the world.

PERTUR

Everton CHAMPIONSHIP MANAGER 2)

Everyone knows that Oily, the programmer of CM2, is an Everton fan, but nobody knows why he felt the need to cheat for them when he made the game, boosting their hidden ratings so that they win things every year, do well in Europe (snork) and have Anders Limpar voted European Footballer of the Year even after he's transferred to a team in Brazil. This, frankly, is almost as sad and pathetic as supporting Everton in the first place, and extremely annoying after a while. Especially when you can't sign a decent player because

Everton always whip in at the last minute and nick them, no matter what financial incentives you offer, and how unlikely the player is to even get a game with the Scouse also-rans. Or when they seem to spend their time looking over your shoulder at your shortlist, and buying players on it even when they're "Unavailable" to you. If you control a lower division side, and are thereby reduced to grubbing around among the flotsam and jetsam of the Endsleigh League, this role seems to fall to Sunderland. (The reason why this should be has foxed the most powerful minds in the universe.)

'The Ponce' Cutter (BURN:CYCLE)

He's a ponce and Thea (Zone Production Ed) really, really loves him. We don't know anything about him and we don't care - all we know is we hate him, because she loves him. (Note to the creators of Space Quest: this is an in-joke, and thus not funny.)

(QUEST FOR FAME)

We hate them. We hate them so much it makes the milk in our tea turn to cottage cheese. They have no right to be alive in the first place, never mind starring in a sodding computer game. Conclusive proof that the wrong people always survive the old rock 'n' roll druggie lifestyle.

Roger Wilco

(SPACE QUEST)

Now Roger Wilco is one helluva guy - in the worst possible sense. As you can see from the picture, he's totally gormless. As if that's not bad enough, he ponces about in a poxy space suit, is thick as shit, makes in-jokes in a stupid and thoroughly irritating voice, and you wouldn't want to be him in a million trillion years. If you had a choice between reincarnation as a viral infection on a dung beetle's mouth, or Roger Wilco, you'd go for the viral infection every time. He's simply unbearable. The last time I saw an arsehole this big, there was a diverticulitis outbreak in the elephant house at London Zoo (I'm not entirely sure I really wanted to know that! - Ed).

Noctropolis

Call me a saddo, but I'm buggered if I can get anywhere in an adventure game: even if I am the Formula I World Champion, and I've defeated the Hordes of Hell. Could your Royal Slugness help me overcome my deficiencies in this area? Noctropolis is a damn fine earne, but what do I do after the Bornick mansion? Name and address withheld by request

Well, Dave Jones of Fearon Rd, Hastings, Well, Dave Jones of Fearon Rd, Hastings, East Sussex, there isn't any obvious result from speaking with the lady of the house, but once you've done it return to the mausoleum and re-enter the room with the coffin. Move the body nearest the door to reveal a key – use it to open the coffin, then climb inside.

And while we're on Noctropolis III answer another reader's query regarding the observatory. Avoiding the security lights is awkward when you're trying to get to the platform in the centre, but attempting to get out again can be a real bastard. Sawe the game at this point – when you reload it you'll find you've been moved to the exit you were trying to get to.

Prisoner Of Ice

I'm in Edward's Base. I've opened the safe at Sear's office and taken everything from it. I drew the pentagram, and I've got Hamsum's note-papers with me. I found a stone at the middle of the map of the South Pole, but couldn't extract it. I can see Quincy's card file behind the prisoner, but I can't get it as he eats me each time I get close. Now what?

Haytham Sabru, Cairo

Here are a few things which should move you on a little further. Once you have opened the safe you must look at the table. Use the photo and rubber stamp on the paper. Use the lift to the basement. Go into the central room and pick up the tim. Talk to Miss Trend to make an appointment to see the doctor. When you see thin tell him that Ryan has a stomach ache, and show him the tin. When he leaves pick up the manual from the table and give it to Finlayson. To get into the file room you must pick up the fire extinguisher, use the cigarette on the bin, then hide in the dark corner beside the wooden shelf.

Ultima Underworld II

I've got as far as the ethereal void. I've dispelled all of the Guardian's magic in all of the other realms of existence, but I can't get into the shrine of spirituality. I get as far as the pyramid, but no matter what I do I either get transported back to the beginning of the realm or die. I'm beginning to regret buying this gamel

Steve Baker, Somerset

Hmmm... It took me bloody ages to clean up your letter – I bet your Granny doesn't know you swear like that!

This one's confusing. Here's a shortened version of what the official guide says...

There are several different paths which you must complete to gain access to the pyramid. Each time you solve a path you must climb up and down the pyramid to change the entire colour to that of the path you've just completed. Once you've done that a new coloured path will open – I know there are at least red, purple, blue and yellow ones.

Finally, there's a golden path which must be completed. Here's a tip for this section: besade the etched brass well, cast the 'fly' spell. Assuming that facing the wall is north, fly west as far as you can then repeat for south. Fly east, then save your game as you are about to enter a fight. Once the gold path is complete you will be able to enter the shrine. Once inside, get the blackrook gem and use the amethyst rod.

Day Of The Tentacle

So far I haven't had too much hassle – except at the bit where I have to dry out the defrosted hamster. I also don't know how to get the dime off the floor which is stuck down with chewing gum

Mark Anderson, Bridlington

Defrosting the hamster involves the dodgy use of the microwave (don't try this at home kids!). You'll also need to get the miniature sweater from the tumble drier to slip on the poor thing to keep him warm. To move the dime swap a set of keys with a shady character in the street who is carrying a crowbar.

In reply to another reader who asked, "How do I get my mummy to laugh?" try using the box o' laffs and the dentures on her. (On the other hand, if you told her that you were leaving home she might brighten up considerably. And your Dad would be over the bloody moon!)

Ultima VIII

I know that I must make the Golem open some great big doors, but the problem is that I can't find the one which I think is back in the catacombs.

Also, whereabouts in Tenebrae is the hut holding the slayer?

Patrick Dinneen, South Africa

Well, I'm not sure how to direct you back misde the catacombs because I don't know where you are. However, I can tell you that to find the door you must travel from the pit of death, left, south, left and then down the ledge. You create the Golem by using the 'Create Golem' spell on the mud in the topraght of the screen.

The slayer is found on the east side of Tenebrae, south from the executioner's hood, and under the gem.

Sam and Max

I've reached the vortex but don't know what to do now. I've got most of the objects, none of which seem to be of any use. What are the toilet keys and the binoculars for?

S Aberne, Ireland

Ah.. top game! A crazy rabbit performing mindless acts of violence on totally innocent bystanders - cool! Anyway... at the wortex you should walk through the curtain at the back, talk to the assistant and get the tuff of hair. Return to the corridor and note the colours of the doors. Enter the mirror and turn on the magnets to create the colours of the doors. Enter the mirror and turn on the magnets to create the colours of the doors any child will tell you that if you mix red and blue you'll get purple. Each time you create the corresponding door. Behind the last one you'll find someone who wants a mood ring; providing you have the golf ball retriever you'll be able to get the ring from the ball of twine

I can't believe you've lived this long without learning what a toilet key and binoculars are for! In fact it's not the key you want, but the large metal rasp file which is attached to it; later in the game a Yeti will be only too pleased to receive it. As for the binoculars, you'll need them in the restaurant on top of the ball of twin to find the frog rock.

And finally, just for Steve Wardale, here's how to get into Trixle's caravan: in the tunnel of love, get your torch out (won from the rat game) plus the lens (found in the rat tent) just before you reach the fuse box. Use Max on the box to stop everything. Pull the fat man's moustache to open a secret door – your ansver lies within.

(Far right) ...or a prehistoric jungle with Jurassic flesh eaters ready to pull you off your C&C NOD bike and bite your joystick off.

Command & Conquer: The Covert Operations

The following information has got to be the strangest I've ever encountered. If you have the add-on disk containing the extra missions for Command & Conquer you may be flabbergasted to know that there are even more missions hidden on it than you thought. Not only that, but they take place in Jurassic Park!

Raptors, Tyrannosaurus (and other monsters too difficult to spell) are roaming the battlefield. I kid you not, they're out there.

To access the prehistoric levels, begin the game by typing: <c&c funpark>. From the menu select "Start New Game". Choose either side to play.

MechWarrior 2

If you look in the directory \mex you'll find files which hold each of the variant Mechs that you've created during gameplay. It's possible to rename such files to that of a different kind of Mech and to give it more capacity and tonnage.

Here's an example: Create a Dire Wolf Mech (file name Drawoousk.mek - Drawoousk.mek) which will have a capacity of 100 tons. You can now rename this file to a Firemoth type [FRMOOUSK.MEK - FRM99USK.MEK) which will give you a 100 ton Firemoth. This means you'll have far better armament, but you'll retain a high underweight bonus which will advance you in career honour. Also, with this cheat you can use what is a 100 ton Mech in a 50 ton maximum mission by selecting a small Mech. The Mech will not move as fast, as they take on the engine values of the larger machines, but they gain in extra armour and heat sink values.

Place ammo in your right arm, as this one seems to get shot at less, which means less risk of an ammo explosion. (Submitted by Andrew Fort, Tyne and Wear)

Kingdom O'Magic

(Below) Choose whether you want to play as Shah-Ron, a babe from the planet Comely, or Thidney, a 7-foot lizard who can sustain a lot of blows to the head with vurtually no noticeable change to his mental ability. He also sounds like Victor Meldrew on a bad day!

Fire-breathing dragons, elves, trolls, girls with unfeasibly big knockers – Kingdom O'Magic has it all. What more could a hardened adventurer want? Well, we thought a complete solution might be handy, so we crammed all we had into a leather jockstrap and gave this one a good going over.

HERE ARE ONLY A COUPLE OF differences between the quests whether you're playing Thidney or Shah-Ron – ever helpful, we'll let you know when they occur.

The Traditional Quest

Go to the costume shop and hire a '70s disco outfit. Wait until dark and then enter the disco. When the dancer has finished, attempt to speak to him. If you're playing as 'Thidney he will drop a talisman and 'leggit'; otherwise he will go outside with you and you can take the talisman. Use the talisman in the disco to win the golden boots. Find the wandering dwarf called Goliath and talk to him until he takes your prize. He will go off to war, but when he returns talk to him again to be shown the secret entrance to the Dwarvish Halls.

Now go to the wig shop and get the special offer toupes: this will allow you to enter the hair salon and pick up the holiday brochure. Speak to Granny until she leaves to make tea, allowing you to grab the child in the cage.

Take the ferry across to Baker's Island, and use the child to eat the attacking gingerbread men. Enter the hall and take the box of donuts. Go to the structurally insecure pier and let the policeman eat the donuts - he'll then fall into the water, leaving his sunglasses behind for you to pick up. Leave the town and head for the Gorgon's Valley. At the entrance to the valley Thidney must pick up the book of spells which lies beside the statue of the man with the binoculars. At the entrance to the Gorgon's cave pick up the sword. (Shah-Ron must also pick up the axe which lies nearby.) Enter the Gorgon's cave and your character will automatically use the sunglasses to save themselves. Use the cooker to gain the action man doll, and pick up the paper bag from the floor.

Enter the Backwoods and examine the pair of smoking shoes to receive a security card. Grab the mobile phone and the list of instructions lying nearby.

Follow the trail west to move through De Lorean, then Eastwood to Minar Tragedy. (Note: As you make your way through the snowy Kalibre Pass you will automatically lose hit points.)

Enter the inn in Minar Tragedy and talk to the suspicious character; he will invite you to play a Pacman game, which you must win to be given your own little yellow pacman. Go and use the sword in the vat o' dough. The baker will cover the sword in bread and leave it in the french stick basket. Take the french stick and head for the palace at the other end of the street. Speak with the guards to gain entrance to the palace. Go to the throne room, use the sword to kill the high steward and clean up his remains with the paper bag. Place the action man on the small throne and leave.

Find and enter the trolls' cave, then use the holiday brochure to trun them to stone. Pick up the wedding/invitation list. Walk along the Great Eastern Road until you find the abandoned car, which you must then examine to find the crank handle. Continue along the road to the ferry, then use the crank handle to move the ferry across the river. Go north from the ferry to find Timmy the dog and have a few words with him. (He won't say much, but you'll get the message that he isn't going to let you enter the Barrows.)

Go south to the Gates of Edam, which makes a day pass. Return to the ferry and read the notice on the pole. Return to Timmy and take the drugged meat from his bowl. Go to the Gates of Edam and use the meat to get inside. Enter the inn and go upstairs, where you'll encounter a cat guarding a white sheet - the problem here is that you have to kill it (which includes all of its nine lives), but you can't do this without resting in-between and regaining your strength. Fight the cat until you are almost dead yourself, then go downstairs and pay for a room for the night; sufficiently restored you can return and finish the bastard off. Take the sheet, then enter the honeymoon suite and examine the bed. Having obtained the mirror, go downstairs and take the visitors' book

Go to the Barrows burial chamber, wear the sheet, and hear the ghost speak. Leave the chamber, then return to be given a wedding gift.

Head for the entrance of Rivendull near the cross-roads of the Eastern Road and speak with the mafia elf to get inside. Before having a chat with Don Elrondo, save the game. Speak with the Don and get the hamster which he's using as a paper shredder.

Return to the eastern side of the map, once again using the Kalibre Pass. As you pass through, find and pick up the piece of ice lying on the path. Go to the clearing in De Lorean and enter the tree house to find the king and queen. Speak with the king, who will tell you that he wants some ice: use it on him to be given a wrench. (Note: The ice will melt if you take too long.) Talk to the queen to blackmail her into giving you a wonderful braceler – which she will then change for a bottle of blackh!

Wander the map until you find Terry the wizard, who will then give you a microphone in exchange for the yellow pacman. Return to Flake Town and speak with the Elvis statue outside the disco. In exchange for the microphone, Elvis will give you a rubber plunger. The plunger and the bleach can be used on the blocked toilet at the back of the Moronica tavern, or on the very public toilet. In either case this will clear the Sewer Lake which lets you travel between the east and west side of the map without using the Kalibre Pass useful, but not essential. (Note: The eastbound trip requires you to use the access card on the crack in the door of the western entrance to Moronical.)

Use the hamster on the letterbox to get inside the Big Dark Tower O' Backwoods. Now go upstairs, get the palantine, and use the empty box on it. Examine the 'for sale' sign outside to find the telephone number. Use the mobile phone to ring the number, whereby you'll discover information about the Tower of Rhitegard.

Go to Rhitegard and enter the tower. Move around until you stand on a tile which creates a staircase. Stand near the valve at the bottom of the stairs and use the palantine. By watching you will see when the wizard upstairs enters the toilet; if you get the timing right you can use the wrench on the valve to blast him through the roof. Go upstairs and pick up the light sabre, then continue to the roof to get the sheep.

Return to Flake Town and get the sheep shorn in the hair salon. Take the wool to Granny who will knit you some woolly underpants. Go to the woods and give the underpants to any wandering elf, who will then reward you with a gift voucher. Take the gift voucher to the mafia guard at Rivendull to have a contract taken out on the dragon.

The Magnificent 7-11 Quest
What quickly becomes obvious with the two subsequent quests is that they are two subsequent quests is that they are simply the Traditional Quest with a few additional tasks – and it's these tasks that we're going to concentrate on in this part of the walkthrough. The object of the quest is to recruit the following characters: Super Gingerbread Hero, Balrog, Elvis Golem, Small Caged Beastie, Conrad the Barbarian, Goliath, and the Tree Bloke.

Go to the Flake Inn toilet and promise Conrad you will fetch him toilet paper. Use the sack beside the side door of the disco to get the parrot from Flake Inn. and give it to the ferryman. Go on the ferry to Baker's Island and talk to the water elemental to power the baker's oven. Pick up the rope and the plans. Take the donuts and use them as before to get the policeman's glasses. Once again win the golden boots and give them to the dwarf to recruit him. Go through exactly the same actions at the Gorgon's Cave as before, collecting the same objects. Find the cave with the big chasm and tie the rope to the rock use this on the Balrog to remove his bad tooth and hence recruit him.

Win the Pacman game in Minor Tragedy, and hide the sword in bread from the baker's next door. Kill the high steward as before, then find Terry the 'bunged-up', and you want to be, you'll find the answer to your problems in the wine cellar beneath the inn in Edam village. wizard to swap the Pacman for the microphone, which will recruit the Elvis statue. With your health at a maximum, go to the troil's cave and get the wedding list. With no brochure to assist you you'll need nimble footwork to get in and out alive.

From the inn at Edam you must get the hand mirror, the white sheet and the duvet, then find the trap door in the bar below which leads to the cellar, Pick up the cork. Get the wedding gift from the Barrows as before.

Get the hamster from the Godfather, and the wrench and the toilet cleaner from the king and queen as before. Attack the three dwarfs nearby; while they are all squashed you'll be able to pick up the tubbaware. Obtain the palantine from the tower and use it at Rhitegard as before. From the Tower of Rhitegard get the sabre o' light and the jar o' lightning. Recruit the beastie from the cage on the roof.

Go to the top o' the falls and use the duvet and the cork on the barrel. Go over the falls in the barrel and use the tubbaware to get the grail, which you must give to King Afro to get the toilet paper. Give the paper to Conrad. Use the jar o' lightning outside the baker's house. Use the rolling pin and then the gingerbread cutter on the dough. Go to the balcony and use the switch to activate the gingerbread man. Find the wandering Tree Bloke and recruit him.

The Bizarre and Slightly Twisted Quest

Get the wig from the wig shop, then pick up the brochure and hairspray. Return to the salon and get the spare hair. Trade the hair at the wig shop for the sign. In the inn get the parrot using the sack, and trade the sign for a lighter. Use the lighter and the hairspray to make a flamethrower.

Go to Baker's Island and get the donuts, and then go and obtain the policeman's glasses. (Note: there is a Book of Knots to be picked up here.) Go through the Gorgon's Cave routine.

Go to the spider's web and use the flamethrower to create giant raisins - euugghhh!!! Use the Book of Knots to get the cow.

Find wandering Jack and trade the cow for magic beans. Find a bale of hay in the caves of Moronica and feed the horse in Dimwit Dale to create manure. Plant the beans to create the beanstalk. Enter the giant's kitchen and trade the raisins for a giant candle.

Kill the high steward to get a small key. Perform exactly the same actions as before to get the hamster, followed by the previous routine in the Dark Tower and Rhitegard, In Rhitegard get the sabre o' light and the stilt plans.

Go to the Dwarven Halls and give the stilt plans to the dwarf. Take the asbestos suit. In the field outside Minar Tragedy you'll find the eye-on-astick. Use the small key on the elevator and go to the middle floor. Use the side entrance to the watch-tower, and use the eye to fool the retina scanner. Go to the first floor and wear the orc clothes. Go to the Dark Tower and ring the doprobell three times. Use the giant candle to light the lamp. Z (Right) Giant spiders can be a knotty problem, but they'll look quite different after you've taken a flamethrower to them.

(79) Domark - Sport £29.99

A wasted opportunity. Not as good as the DOS

(85 Recommended) Mindscape - Adventure £19.99 Probably the best game that Windows users have ever played

(85. Recommended) Beau July - Various £39.99 Great games at a great price. A compilation not to be missed, including Populous 2, Jimmy White's Whirlwind Snooker, Car And Driver and Robocod

(50) Codemasters – Platform Game £9.99

What can we say? Wrong time, Wrong format,

Wrong price
Cabriel Con (Co)
(90: Classic) Sierra On-Line – Adventure £44.99 Brooding, atmospheric thriller.

(67) US Gold - Arcade £37 99 You'll shriek! You'll shout! You'll yawn!

(12) Software Business - Arcade/Adventure £29.99 Can basically be summed up in one word dreadful

(65) Mindscape - Racing £39.99

A superb demonstration of what can be done graphically with CD-ROM... and how easy it is for gameplay to suffer as a result. (82: Recommended) Mkrage – Strategy £44.99

Don't let the dodgy graphics fool you. If you give this game half a chance, we reckon you'll be hooked.

(70) Psygnosis - Shoot 'Em Up £49.99 Brilliant graphics and excellent sound. Let down by limited gameplay

ICFL Pro League Feetbell (50) Digital Integration – Sport £39.99

As a play-editor it's okay, but playing the game itself is disappointing

Privateer (80: Recommended) Electronic Arts – Add-On £19 99 Privateer fans definitely won't be disappointed with this one. (83: Recommended) Electronic Arts - Simulation

A highly atmospheric sub sim with a control interface from hell.

(70) MicroProse - Strategy £44.99 It could have been excellent. Could have been

Damn! (70) Daze Marketing - Strategy £39.99

(43) Mirage – Rote-Playing Garne £44.99
Don't ask your friends to play this if you want to keep them

Unnecessary Roughness (66) Accolade - Sport £39.99 Best described as 'all right'. It's as good as most American footy sims

Issue 15 - June 1994

(75) MicroProse - Role-Playing Game £39.99 Hindered by outdated implementation, but still well worth a look

(63) Electronic Arts - Strategy £44.99 For die-hard strategy aficionado

(90: Classic) Cyberdreams - Adventure £44.99

If you have a taste for the macabre, you'll never forget the Darkseed affair. 40) Millennium – Puzzle Game £34.99

Mind-numbingly tedious. (75) Infogrames – General Interest £99.99

More serious approach with superb sample animations that you can't usel (69) MicroProse – Adventure £39.99

A beautiful adventure game that won't tax your brain too heavily.

(40) Mindscane -- Simulation £34.99 Oh, so very close, but it's got more bugs than

Watergate (40) Domark - Sport £29.99

The champions of sport produce yet another world-beater.

(86: Recommended) MicroProse - Flight Sim £44.99 Heavyweight flight sim, both helped and hindered by over-clever graphics (75) Empire – General Interest £49.99

Tries to make everything fun and encourages you to try out other methods of animation Fig. 180: Recommended) Spectrum Holobyte ~

As that well known saying goes: 'If you like Falcon 3, you'll just love Hornet.

(67) Electronic Arts - Adventure £44.99 Surreal and atmospheric, if not realistic Pacific Strike (80. Recommended) Electronic Arts - Flight Sim £49.99 Miles better than Strike Commander but requires a state-of-the-art ninja PC

Pagent: Utima IIII (78) Electronic Arts – Role-Playing Game £44.99 Without doubt a love/hate relationship for Ultima purists.

(78) US Gold - Role-Playing Game £45.99 A playable and accessible RPG

(60) Cyberdreams - Adventure £39.99 The graphics are poor and the control system

(95: Classic) Maris Multimedia Ltd - General Interest Stunning program which will be hard to beat.

(60) Krisalis - Strategy £29.99

This has all been done before, and done much better as well. (70) Electronic Arts - Role-Playing Game £39.99

Considerable enhancements for on but the gameplay remains the same. (70) Reactor/Ubisoft - Adventure £44.99

Very slick, very polished. The gameplay's a bit limited but it's fun all the same. (80: Recommended) Ocean - Simulation £44.99

Great game with totally superfluous bells and whistles

(93 Classic) MicroProse - Strategy £44.99 Brilliantly designed, perfectly implemented and totally absorbing

Weekington DC (85; Recommended) Supervision - Flight Sim Add-On

Issue 16 - July 1994

(65) Interplay - Strategy £49.95 Interplay usually releases excellent games this isn't one of them.

(90: Classic) Optima – Flight Sim £49.99 Brilliant action-packed helicopter simulation at a great price on CD

Companions Of Kerth (CD) (84: Recommended) Accolade - Role-Playing Game €39.99

Great game on disk. Even better on co. Corridor 7 (55) Gametek - Arcade £19.99

Nothing new or exciting.

(85: Recommended) Impressions - Strategy Game An intriguing strategy/sim which boasts both originality and playability. (67) Elite Systems – Adventure £39.99

An interactive cartoon that's more 'cartoon' than 'interactive (40) Rebellion - Space/Strategy £39.99

Very futuristic, very Elite and very, very crap.
(86. Recommended) US Gold - Simulation £45.99

SSI cruises easily to the head of the fleet with this simply stunning sim. (78) Virgin Interactive Entertainment - Adventure

Good game, shame about the conversion. In this case, more equals less

(85: Recommended) Accolade - Sport £19.99 A good golf game at an amazing price. James White's Whitwind Specker (80. Recommended) Hit Squad - Sport £14.99 Dangerously addictive snooker sim.

Lucky's Casino Adventure (60) Mirage – Card Game £44 99

Lure Of The Temptress (55) Hit Squad – Adventure £14 99 Old and fading.

er Game 2 (CD) (70) Activision - Simulation £29.99 Worth looking at if you don't have the hardware to run the latest sim. nson's Requi (85: Recommended) Daze Marketing - RPG £39.99

Highly original, addictive 'survival sim' which, unfortunately, has some annoying bits.
Sam And Max Hit The Hoad (93: Classic) US Gold - Adventure £45.99 Brilliantly original, a highly humourous jaunt.

(70) Hit Squad - Strateny £16.99

Still a great game but check out Sim City 2000 first

n City Enhan

(82: Recommended) Internlay - Strategy £49.99 Sim City's an excellent game but 50 quid is a bit steep for a few enhancements

(45) Hit Squad - Platform Game £9.99 Third-rate platformer Stay well away from it. Space Hulk

(87: Recommended) Electronic Arts - Strategy £39.99 Still a tremendous game, but not as good as the disk-based version Summer Challenge & Winter Challenge (80: Recommended) Accolade - Sport £19.99

Good compilation, great value. (87: Recommended) US Gold - Strategy/Arcade Game

Not an original concept but extremely well implemented. The Rock 'n' Roll Years - The '50s (70) Supervision - General Interest £24.99

Handy for 50's music lovers or as a reference but we doubt if it'll get you rockin' round the (89: Recommended) Blue Byte - Strategy £39.99 A damn fine, engrossing game.

Theatre Of War (70) Hit Squad - Strategy £12.99 Excellent strategy game and it looks cool, too.

(93: Classic) MicroProse - Strategy £44.99 Our Chris's favourate, this is an incredibly addictive strategy game. Wembley Rugby League (66) Audiogenic - Sport £29.99

This manages to be quite an improvement on previous rugby games.

(60) Optima - Strategy £29.99 Disappointingly average World Cup Challenge (48) Winsport – Sport £29.95

Disappointing, absurdly RAM-hungry and limited in its playing life

1942: Pacific Air War (89: Recommended) MicroProse - Flight Sim £44.99

(do. incoming amos – Carrier Battles and Task Force 1942 – in one package. It's a winner! Al Quadim: The Genie's Curse (40) US Gold/SSI – Role-Playing Game £35.99

The thinking amoeba's beat 'em up (43) Max Design - Strategy £39.99

Hey, it's just like being there (80: Recommended) Virgin Interactive Entertainment --

Platform Game £29.99 Charm and accessibility save it from being strictly seventies-up!

(64) Bethesda Softworks - Shoot 'Em Up £45.99 Very fast and pretty stunning to look at, but it won't keep you up into the night Dinosaur Detective Agency (42) Alternative Software – Platform Game £16.99 Cheap - but that's no reason to be cheerful

(Left) X-Wing: groove on down to the old 'destroy the Death Star, save the croissant-haired princess' tune

(57) Empire - Sport £29.99 Let down by small viewing area, unintelligent player reactions and poor scrolling

(50) New Era Software - Sport £29,99 Horse-racing fanatics might get something out of it, but the experience will pall. International Tennis Open (88: Recommended) Philips Interactive Media -

Definitely the new number one seed in the field of PC tennis simulations. Jack Nicklaus (CD)

(78) Accolade - Sport £16.99

A perfectly serviceable golf game with a good course editor tacked on. Wait for me while I put my golfing shoes on ek 3 Globocap (CD) (0) Mindscape – General Interest £39.99

The most expensive beer mat in the world. (85: Recommended) Virgin Interactive Entertainment +

Simulation £39,99 An old idea made new with some interesting

tweaks Pinball Dreams 2 (70) 21st Century Entertainment – Pinball £19.99

Not bad at all. There's plenty for pinball wizards to get their flippers into. Shanghai II: Dragon's Eye (88. Recommended) Activision - Puzzle Game £29.99

Puzzles galore in this excellent addition to the rather mediocre range of games currently available for Windows
Sherlock Holmes - The Case Of The Serrated

(48) Flectronic Arts - Adventure £49.99 Elementary, my dear Watson... and that's the problem Simon The Sorcerer (CB) (89: Recommended) Adventuresoft UK Ltd -

Adventure £44 99 A tricky adventure jaunt boosted by excellent talkie bits.

Syndicate (CD) (92: Classic) Electronic Arts - Strategy £39.99 What a game. What a barg cal Manager (75) Black Legend - Sport £34.99 An interesting little number with the odd weakness, but several nice idea

Theme Park (93 Cassic) Electronic Arts - Strategy £44.99 A highly inventive 'business' sim that's fun fun, fun. Hip hip hoorah for Bullfrog!

Walls Of Rome (74) Digital Integration – Strategy £16 99

Good, if thin, fun dd Cup USA 194

(78) US Gold - Sport 932.99 Good features, difference of opinion over the

(82: Recommended) Millennium - Platform

Beneath A Steel Sky (CD)

(72) Virgin Interactive Entertainment - Adventure £39.99 Comic book-style adventure with excellently funny dialogue but lacking any real depth (40) Impressions - Wargame £39.99

A sluggish, unrealistic and bug-ridden attempt at a wargame without many redeeming features. FIFA International Soccer (70) Electronic Arts – Sport £39.99 Looks and sounds great, but lacks gameplay.

on II (70) Electronic Arts - Simulation £44.99 Massive, embarrassingly serious sim. Superb detail, occasionally nail-biting, always

Inherit The Earth - Quest For The Ort (72) US Gold - Adventure £39.99

mational Sensible Space (78) Renegade - Sport £19.99

Litil Divil (CD) (88. Recommended) Gremlin Graphics - Adventure £34 99

Excellent, original and addictive stal And Lace: The Battle Of The Robo Bal (35) Megatech - Beat 'Em Up £39.99

Totally devoid of any entertainment value whatsoever

(68) Ascon - Scort £34.99 Too many frills, not enough body

(84. Recommended) Sierra On-Line - Strategy £49 99 A superb game Addictive if you've got the hardware, hell if you haven't. Shadow Of The Comet (CD)

(88: Recommended) Infogrames - Adventure £39.99 A worthwhile reworking of a great game, but still very idiosyncratic Soccer Kld

(30) Krisalis - Platform Game 929 99 If you want happening platform action, then buy something else. Theatre Of Death

(35) Psygnosis - Arcade/Strategy £34.99 Below average imitation of an above-average

(94: Classic) Virgin Interactive Entertainment - Space Sim £49.99

Issue 15 - October 1994

(90 Classic) SSI - Wargame £39 99 Never mind the so-ton tanks - this is so-tons of solid, fire-beiching wargame Absolutely brilliant (65) Dynamix - Strategy £TBA

A battle game with bugs in it (as opposed to a bugged battle game).

Dark Legions

(85: Recommended) SSI - Strategy £35.99 Wonderfully entertaining animations and game screens with hidden strategic depths III lies

(45) Core - Adventure £39.99 Great game, shame you can't play it

(50) Time Warner - Adventure 949 99 It's the same old story. Great graphics, but sadly lacking in gameplay. ar Racing Expa

(94: Recommended) Virgin Interactive Entertainment ~ Oriving £17.99 These tracks are better than the original tracks (if you pretend Phoenix doesn't exist) Ishar III: The Seven Gates Of Infinity (50) Simarils – Strategy £39.99

Sum up Ishar III in one word? Avoid, Simple as that. The worst of a bunch

(65) Hit Squad - Adventure £14.99 Bargain? Maybe Boring? Definitely. Kick Off 3 (55) Anco - Sport £29.99

Nice features, but gameplay isn't up to much Manchester United Premier League Champions (60) Krisalis – Sport £29.99 us revisited (although not as good) with a lot of features thrown in

The World Cup produced a rash of rush releases This is not one of the best Police Quest IV - Open Season (80 Recommended) Sierra On-Line - Adventure

(68) Infogrames - Sport 939.99

Atmospheric and very entertaining A bit of a let down at the end, though mer Challenge (73) Hit Squad - Sport £12.99

Not a bad game by sports sim standards and easy to cheat at, but do you really want another sport sim?

Under A Killing Moon (CD) US Gold – Adventure £59.99

Pigs can fly. Interactive movies do exist. Sort

(76) Electronic Arts - Flight Sim €44.99

Lots of good ideas stuck together but somehow it doesn't hang quite right

(80: Recommended) Sierra On-Line - Strategy Game ₹39.99

Space strategy thing which is a bit like Outpost without the pretty bits. Daunting at first, but ultimately very rewarding. Chaos Engine

(80. Recommended) Renegade - Arcade £32 99 A damned good, multi-direction scrolling shooty thing with lots of big guns and silly characters (90 Classic) MicroProse - Strategy £44.99 Try to imagine Givilization with more depth and better graphics Well done .. you've just imagined Colonization Cyclemania (CD) (83: Recommended) Accolade - Arcade Gami

£39.99 Extremely competent Road Rash 300 rsp-off with lovely digitised backdrops and big

motorbikes Desert Strike

(78) Gremlin - Arcade £34.99

Conversion of the Mega Drive classic isometric helicopter, blast 'em up game The graphics are a bit crap but it's immensely playable.

(90. Classic) Virgin Interactive - Arcade Game £49.99 The sequel to one of the best games ever. New graphics, a new gun and brand new monstievonsties. Miss it at your peril

Inferno (CD) (88. Recommended) Ocean - Space/Sim £44.99 Eagerly awaited game from DID. Lots of big space ships and silly looking aliens. One of the better space combat game KA-50 Hokum (85. Recommended) Virgin - Simulation £39.99 Without a doubt the very best helicopter sim noney can buy. Something for the propeller heads (ves. we know you're out there).

HL Hockey 95 (CD) (91 Classic) FA - Sports/Arcade 934 99

A new version of the top-down scrolly, ice hockey game. Basically the same as the original (reviewed issue seven) but with new stats PGA 486 (CD)

(91: Classic) Electronic Arts - Sports £44 99 Gorgeous looking, solid playing, tasty little golf game. One of the best on the PC so far. Il Breams CD

(70) 21st Century - Arcade £39.99 Eight wonderfully designed, smoothly scrolling pinball tables. Why's it on CD? 'Cause there are lots of pointless rendered bits, that's why

(95: Classic) EA/Origin - Role-Playing Game £44.99 Pant-wettingly fantastic, cyberpunk, RPG thing. All hail System Shock, that shalt be king hereafter (at least until System Shock II com at, that is)

e In The Dark 2 CD (93: Classic) infogrames - Adventure 944.99

A sequel that is noticeably better than the original and comes with some serious co enhancements. What a refreshing change Dawn Patrol (80: Recommended) Empire - Flight Sim £44.99

A gorgeous looking SVGA WWI flight sim with a bit of a different idea behind it... it's an interactive book, apparently.

(74) Empire - Role-Playing Game £44.99 Cyberpunk RPG with lots of violence and a shagging scene that has now become infamous.

(93. Classic) Psygnosis -- Adventure £44,99 An utterly brilliant Alone in the Dark-alike with ellipsoid-generated characters and lots of pert FIFA CD

(76) Electronic Arts - Sports £39.99 A smart-looking footy game that just falls short of being an absolute belter

Little Big Adventure (93: Classic) Electronic Arts - Adventure Game

944.99 A truly amazing adventure with pretty graphics and weird French gameplay Gobsmacking

Magic Carpet (96: Classic) Electronic Arts – Shoot 'Em Up £44.99 Bloody excellent shoot 'em up looks brilliant, totally addictive. A must-have

(76) Team 17 - Shoot 'Em Uo £19.99 A very competent and nicely low-priced little shoot 'em up. Rise Of The Robe (88: Recommended) Mirage - Beat 'Em Up £44.99

Possibly the best beat 'em up on the PC so far with some excellent rendered sprites.

Space Simulator

(75) Microsoft - Simulator 939,99 A huge simulation of man's quest for space that is just a little too ambitious for its own

good Star Crucad

(60) Gametek - Shoot 'Em Up £39.99 Basically this is a poor man's Wing Commander with some nice on bits

Transport Ty (94: Classic) MicroProse - Strategy £44,99 One of the best strategy games around and a more than worthy sequel to Railroad Tycoon

(74) ICE - Short 'Em (in £27 99) Good challenging fun and a more than competent conversion of the original arcade machine

Issue 22 – January 1995

Aces Of The Deep

(90: Classic) Dynamix/Sierra - Naval Sim £39.99 Graphics, gameplay, sound and atmo combine to make this the best sub game available
All New World Of Lemmings

(78) Digital Integration - Puzzle Game £39 99 If you like all the other Lemmings games, you'll Armored Fist (CII)

(86. Recommended) US Gold/Novalogic - Simulation 544.99

Commanche on wheels. Er, tracks. You know what we mean Creature Shock (78) Virgin Adventure Game £49.99

An engrossing, atmospheric 3D adventure game Great graphics, absorbing levels, but lousy soundtrack.

(55) SCI - Arcade Adventure £49.99 It looks amazing. The gameplay isn't Dark Sun II

(80 Recommended) Mindscape - RPG £44.99 Love it for its brains, not for its looks. (96: Classic) Psygnosis - Adventure Game £49,99

Discworld is possibly the best point-and-click adventure game ever made.
(85' Recommended) Sierra – Sport £44,99

It takes all the best bits from all the best games and ends up being the best.

(88: Recommended) Europress - Game Designer for Windows £39.99 Neat intuitive, and loads of fun.

(40) Psygnosis - Shoot 'Em Up £44.99 Repeat ad nauseam 'Pretty graphics doth not a game make."

(50) US Gold - Racing Game £39.99 Knock off 30 whole points for no two-player mode Sod off Power Drive.

(80: Recommended) Gametek - Shoot 'Em Up

An excellent blast and it looks good, too

(45) Gremlin Interactive - Shoot 'Em Up £39.99 Not only is it a below average shoot 'em up, it has pretensions too

(90 Classic) Electronic Arts - Flight Sim £44.99 If it had a multi-player facility, we would've given it 100. But it hasn't, so we won't.

(75) Interplay - Strategy £39.99
Good, simple, addictive strategy game.

Issue 23 - February 1995

(95 Classic) Infogrames - Adventure £44.99 The mega-stonkingly weird and wonderful final chapter in the Alone In The Dark trilogy

(74) Virgin Interactive - Arcade/Strategy £34 99 Just more of the same, or is Cannon Fodder 2 a significant improvement? Sensible returns with more 'fun with a gun'

(61: Recommended) Mindscape - Adventure Gami F44 99

It's French, and guess what? It's weird, Very weird We try not to get at them for it... but this is just plain mad

(80: Recommended) Interplay - Adventure/Shoot 'Em Up £49.99

A contender for the 'Best-looking game of 1994' award 'Tastier than treacie pudding with lashings of thick custard, and almost certainly better than Rebel Assault (81: Recommended) Mindscape - Adventure £44 99

Cryo's epic multi-co graphic adventure finally arrives. Is it just more French weirdness or is it actually a decent game?

(77) US Gold - Strategy £TBA

Nordic domination and general Euro-bashing in this simple but addictive strategy war simfrom New World Computing.

(87: Recommended) Virgin - Adventure £44.99

Westwood's Fables and Flends series makes it to number three, and this time you get to play the bad guyl

(71) Virgin - Platform Game £29.99

The smash-bit movie turns into a reasonableplatform game. PC Zone good tip number one just pretend your PC is a Mega Drive

(84. Recommended) Virgin - Racing Sim £44.99 Papyrus follows up IndyCar with the popular American sport of driving round in circles

(79) Electronic Arts - Artventure 944 99 For a change EA goes all weird, gothic and horrific in this unusual super-hero adventure. (78) Team 17 - Beat 'Fm Un 929 99

An Amiga conversion from Team 17. But don't be put off by that - it's actually quite good

(40) Interplay - Adventure £39.99 Not as pervy as you might think. Yes, there are suspenders and brassieres in it, but don't buy it hoping for nudity or naughtiness 'cos you won't find any (er well, not much, at least not enough to satisfy the male staff on PC Zone).

(62) Electronic Arts - Flight Simulation 959 99 Four million dollars, Luke Skywalker and a well-known norn actress - a notentially interesting situation, if ever there was one.

Issue 24 - March 1995

(70) Virgin - Arcade $29.99

He leaps tall buildings, cuts through baddies with his scimitar and wears pointy slippers. He's Aladdin who else?

(95. Classic) LucasArts/Virgin - Action Adventure

The empire is finally Doomed, but is it better than the real thing? We bring you the first review of the game everyone's litching to get their hands on, in a special world exclusive. courtesy of LucasArts and Virgin

(55) Merit – Action Adventure £39 99
We put Merit's Dr Radiaki up against Elite's Virtuoso and run for cover (well, Doom, actually). A Cyberpunk Thriller

(25) Gametek - Adventure £39 99 It is: it isn't. If it's really this bad then start praying for forgiveness immediately.

Cick Off 3: Furni an Challenge (70) Anco - Sport £29.99

The last Kick Off was an absolute nightmare Has Anco finally got it together in Europe'

(93 Classic) Sierra - Adventure £44.99 The latest point-and-click extravaganza from the Roberta Williams' school of mush-wushy, cutesy-wutesyness.

(10) Megatech - Adventure £49.99 A plentiful lack of beat 'em up action strides onto the PC, courtesy of Megatech Ouch!

(68) Mindscape - Role-Playing Game £TBA Not a tasty lozenge that promises to clear your stuffy nose and soothe your sore throat, but a rather ordinary role-playing game

(87: Recommended) Sierra ~ Simulation £39.99 Go stomping mad in this spectacular HERC-fest.

Just one thing though, why have extravagant HERCS that walk when the terrain is flat? (85. Recommended) US Gold - Bole-Playing Gami

The sequel to the keenly received Blade Of Destroy finally makes it onto CD-ROM. Hip, hip.

(82. Recommended) Virgin - Action £TBA The most fun you can have with your bum an inch off the ground, when wearing a crash helmet and clad in brightly-coloured leather.

(73) LucasArts - Space/Action £19 99 Two new missions and a new ship. What ever will they think of next?

(78) Electronic Arts - Flight Sim £TBA Chocks away as Origin reach for the skies to do battle with the Hun, chaps with 'taches and every other WWI flight sim ever created

Issue 25 - April 1995

(62) Core Design -- Racing Sim £34.99 Best described as a kind of Chuck Rock meets Super Mario Kart. Unfortunately, the clash of these two mega-games hasn't proven to be that good. Oops ed Adventure (70) Core Design - Adventure £39.99 This is the follow up to Nippon Safes... arrgh.

keep it away! Hang on a minute, though, Big nture looks like it could be quite good

(95: Classic) Electronic Arts - Action Adventure $44.99 The first 'real' interactive movie? Or is it just another game that looks like Alone In The Dark? (94 Classic) Interplay - 3D Shoot 'Em Up £44 99

uld this be the game to finally knock Do off the top spot? The fabulous 3D game from Interplay arrives at last.

(78) iD/Raven - 3D Shoot 'Em Up £39 99 'Doom-in-tights.' Can a fighting fantasy version of the greatest game of all time, ever, ever, really be better? Er. no.

(57) Virgin - 3D Shoot 'Em Ho 934 99 A distinctly average 'big robot' game joins the ranks of other distinctly average 'big robot' games on the pc

(65) Mindscane - Strategy Wargame £34 99

This is definitely one for the Hex-heads, this is. It's intense, ludicrously strategic and it runs under Windows. Eek!

(76) Virgin - Adventure £34.99

Cryo's dinosaur game finally arrives a year after it was unveiled. It's a bit like Jurassic Park meets Dragon Lore

(50) Activision - VCS Atari Compilation £24.99 This compilation includes lots of really ancient Activision Atari VCS games, all for Windows and all on one CD. So what's it like?

Well, it's like a time machine that takes you somewhere a bit crap!

(78) Mindscape - Adventure £44.99 Yet another Doom clone - but not a bad one by any means - from the team that brought us both Heretic and Shade

Football Glory (60) Kompart – Sports £TBA

Q: When is Sensible Soccer not really Sensible

A: When it's a not-quite-so-good copy called

(58) Psygnosis - Adventure £39.99 Sequel-ola. Guilty is the follow up to the awful

Innocent Until Caught, and it's significantly better, but still not brilliant (79) Gremlin - Shoot 'Em Up £39.99

Another sequel .. this time, the sequel to Desert Strike But this shoot 'em up is bigge more varied and harder than the original. Not

(90 Classic) Electronic Arts - Sport £44.99 EA Sports awakens from a period of dormancy with this absolutely corking basketball arcade game - the best of its type around

(75) SSI - Space Sim 944 99

SSI's TIE Fighter/Wing Commander wannabe in glorious svga. A surprisingly playable space warfare game Rise Of The Trial

(82: Classic) US Gold and PD Selections - Adventure £39.95

Some love it and some hate it... but of the Doom-alikes, this is one of the best. Super Fron

(40) Team 17 - Platform £19.99 A platform game with a frog in it. . Uh-huh. Okay

(60) Domark - Simulation £39.99

A budget-style tank game at full price If you've got more money than sense, you'll really love it!
Woodruff and the Schnibble of (75) Sierra Adventure £39.99

wonderfully deceptive adventure with comicbook feel!

(94 Classic) MicroProse - Strategy £44 99 The first X-COM was absolutely brilliant. This sequel is even better still

Issue 27 - June 1995

(25) Domark - Adventure £39 99

Chris had a jolly splended time reviewing last month's 'interactive-try-to-get-laud-simulator What will the softies come up with next? (92: Classic) LucasArts/Virgin - Adventure

Hooray for LucasArts adventures. Big, tough

guy biker stuff this time. Splendid Flight Of The Amazon Queen (50) Warner Interactive -- Adventure £39.99 This tries desperately to be a LucasArts adven ture but fails quite miserably. Sorry, it's naff

Hardball 4 (83 Recommended) Accolade/Warner - Arcade/ Sports £39.99

Returning May's theme of 'sequels', Warner Interactive brings us the fourth Hardb Surely Warner have to call it quits now?

High Seas Trader (62) Impressions - Strategy/Simulation Game £39.99 Affectionately referred to as 'High Street Trader' in the PC Zone office, this is the latest strategy offering from Impressions.

(80, Recommended) Builfrog - Arcade/Strategy P19 99

A sort of add-on thingy for Magic Carpet with lots of snow. The trouble is though, it's completely and utterly, stupidly, bloody hard.

(69) Psygnosis - 3D Shoot 'Em Up £29.99 A very poor Descent-wannabe from Psygnosis

Fortunately though, it's considerably cheaper Psycho Pinb (78) Codemasters - Arcade £44.99

Pinball from Codemasters Some nice tables Some nice music, Sorted. Silnstream 5000

(88. Recommended) Gremlin Interactive - Arcade/ Shoot 'Em Up £39.99

Slipstream is a three-dimensional-fabby-whizzo racing/shooting/speedy thing from Gremlin. Splendid stuff, and better than boring, run-of-

Star Trek: TNG - "A Final Unity" (94: Classic) MicroProse - Adventure £49.99

Yes, it may have a ridiculously long title, but

er Streetfighter II Turb (90: Classic) Gametek - Beat 'Em Up £39.99 SSFII Turbo is one of the best arcade conversions ever seen on the wo eroga

(78) Mindscape - Naval/Strategy £44.99 Silly name but a damn fine naval strategy game Lovely graphics and splendid CD bits. (85. Recommended) Titus – Strategy £44.99

Snazzy 3D svGA chess thingy from Titus, France This one's different looking and with a ninja bastard brainbox.

(85: Recommended) Mindscape - Beat 'Em Up £39.99 What, yet another beat 'em up? Anyone would think there's a shortage of 'em or something

Issue 28 - July 1995

1830 (68) US Gold - Board Game £39,99

Set in the early years of American colonisation, a sort of Railroad Tycoon meets Risk Strictly for those of trainspotter persuasion Alex Dampier Pro Hockey

(66) Merit Software - Sports Sim £39.95 Ice hockey sim with FIFA-style viewpoint, but impossible control system, and comes no where near NHL Hockey '95

Allen Breed: Tower Assault (81) Team 17 – Shoot 'Em Up £29.99

Brett Hull Hockey 195 (73) Accolade/Warner - Sports Simulation £39.99 Top-down ice hockey game, which doesn't match the king of ice hockey sims, NHL Hockey '95, but betters Alex Dampier Pro Hockey '95

(40) Philips/Infogrames - Shoot 'Em Uo £39.99 Unbelievably terrible futuristic FMV shoot 'em up that was passable on CD-i, but should never have seen the light of day on PC.

Command & Conquer (95: Classic) Virgin – Strategy Adventure £44.99

Dune 2 meets Cannon Fodder in this brilliant game of soldiers. It's without doubt one of the best of its genre around right now.

(58) Virgin - Adventure $44.95 Interactive movie game that fails to make the grade - and, for what it's worth, stars Tia Carrere, the babe from Wayne's World.

(42) US Gold - Strategy Game £39.99 Fantasy battle game with good graphics and comprehensive interface but lacking that vital ingredient – gameplay. Frontier: First Encounter

(78) Gametek - Space Strategy Simulation

Disappointing enhanced version of Elite II. which is also bugged to juggery Jagged Alliance (72) Mindscape – Strategy Game £39.99

Risk meets Syndicate in this strategy battle jaunt. It's not groundbreaking or particularly original but quite good fun all the same

(35) BMG Interactive - Shoot 'Em Up £34.99 Dreadful FMV shoot 'em up not worth the paper its manual was printed on Machiavelli The Prince

(89) MicroProse - Strategy Game £44.99

Colonization-style sim packed with political intrigue, assassmations, plagues, pirates and a unique play by e-mail feature. Man Utd: The Double

(71) Krisalis – Sports Sim £29.99 The best Manchester United game yet, but it's still not a patch on the excellent Sensible

Soccers of this world. Sim Tower (70) Maxis - Strategy Game £39.99

Basically Sim City viewed from the side with the emphasis on tower blocks, but not as addictive - and the presentation is dire Virtual Pool

Issue 29 - August 1995

(83, Recommended) Empire - Strategy Game £44,99 The sequel to Fields Of Glory, and jolly nice it FX Fighter

(93: Classic) Philips/GTE - Beat 'Em Up £39.99 The closest thing to Virtua Fighter on the PC and by far the best beat 'em up you can buy We love it!

Hi-Octane (83. Recommended) Bullfrog/Electronic Arts - Racing

Game £39.99 Bullfrog surprises everyone by releasing a racing game, and surprises everyone e more by not saying anything about it until it's nearly finished Hmm

ro Machines 2 (92: Classic) Codemasters - Racing Game £44.99 A brilliant, simple and effective racing game with a rather nifty little track designer

Perfect General 2 (82: Recommended) Mirage Software – Strategy

Wargame £44.99 Hex-tastic strategy game for those of you who really like your wargames intense.

Picture Perfect Golf

Picture Perfect Goff (30) Empire – Sports Sim £44.99 Pretty bloody naff. But hey, if you want to look at nice, digitised pictures of a golf course, this is well worth the dosh

Prisoner Of Ice (88: Recommended) Infogrames - Adventure £44.99

The second in the Chulku range – and it's a stonker of a point-and-click adventure.

Scottish Open Golf

(60) Core Design – Sports Sim £39.99

Core Design finally releases its 3D virtual golf thing. There are some okay bits and some pretty nob bits. Unfortunately, it's the nob bits that win through

(7) Milleonium/Psygnosis - Adventure Game £39.99 Millennium and Psygnosis team up to produce an adventure which is truly... quite awful

(62) Time Warner - Snorts Sim 934 99

A football game that looks really fab and

groovy, but doesn't quite cut it in the ameplay stakes

(80; Recommended) Warner Interactive - Interactive Movie £39,99

Across the Rhine

(86: Recommended) MicroProse - Strategy £44.99 If you're a propellor head you'll think it's the dog's gonads, If you're a bit of a thicky, you'll still like it, once you work your way through the laborious manual, that is.

(50) Ubisoft - Football Sim £34.99

It had potential, but ultimately Action Soccer seems to have been relegated to the ranks of 'another crap footie game'

(84: Recommended) Mindscape - Flight Sim £44.99 Rowan teams up with Mindscape and chucks in all the best bits from its other flight sims, to make up a sort of fantasy strategy game, which is really pretty groovy.

(BO: Recommended) Infogrames - Business Sim F44.99

A business sim for people who love trains. (Yee gods! What next?)

(59) Interplay - Role Playing Game £44.99 It came out late and it wasn't worth the wait Disappointingly out-dated and old-fashioned

(45) Sierra - Space Combat Sim £44.99 A good Windows-based adventure game, which is completely ruined by crap combat sections.

Lords Of Midnight (60) Domark - Adventure £44.99 Another very old game that's been given the seque! treatment - our reviewer said it was the biggest let-down since that leak in his inflatable Claire Rayner (81: Recommended) Maxis - Simulation £29.99

Fun and educational in equal measures. But even better, you can make people say rude things when they're pissed off. n The Sorcerer 2

(84: Recommended) Adventure Soft (UK) - Adventure Game £44.99

Space Quest 6

(70) Sierra - Adventure Game £44.99 Trite adventure completely devoid of humour. Space Quest fairs will love it! Terminal Velocity

(80; Recommended) US Gold - Shoot 'Em Uo

Very good 3D engine, wearing a pair of rather unoriginal, unaddictive 'game-play trousers'.

US Marine Fighters (92: Classic) Electronic Arts — Fight Sim £19.99 Absolutely brilliant. The only thing that prevented us giving US Marine Fighters 100 per cent was the lack of a network facility

Issue 31 - October 1995

(97: Classic) Ocean/DID - Flight Sim £49.99 Something for everyone The best balance between simulator and game, ever. Farie To Bi

(94: Classic) Electronic Arts - Arcade Adventure F44 99

A corking follow up to Flashback, with lots of spinny-aroundy polygon bits, morphing monsties and big guns.

(89: Recommended) Electronic Arts - Racing £44.99 There's no need to buy a 300 now this has made it to the PCI This sits somewhere between Screamer and the forthcoming FIGP2. We love the splendid crashes!

che Long 496: Classic) D<sub>i</sub>gital Integration – Sim £39.99

The best helicopter sim around; although Comanche looks better, nothing comes close to matching the mixture of spot on handling, tactics, networking and atmosphere

Burled In Time (77) US Gold – Interactive Movie £44.99

wn Away (19) Instant Access - Interactive Movie £39.99 A pretty crap game of a pretty crap film

(10) Gametek - Shoot 'Em Up £24.99 It came, it saw, it sucked. Ideal as a present for someone you don't like.

nings 30 (71) Psygnosis - Puzzle Game £39.99

We've seen it all before, all that's new is that it's now from a different angle Yawn.

Player Manager 2 (45) Anco – Sport £34.99 Visually stunted, it's difficult to control the ball. What else? Oh, it's one to avoid

Championship Manager 2 (92. Classic) Domark - Sport £44 99 (TBC)

Every other football management game is just that - a game - but this one actually becomes

Issue 32 - November 1995

Al Unser Jr Racing

(60) Mindscape - Racing Game $29.99 It has all the features you'd expect from a racing game but ultimately it's fun for only a limited time.

(93: Classic) Virgin - Strategy £39.99 More than just another space-based strategy game, this has got all the best bits of every god/strategy/warfare game available. A word of warning though, get stuck into this and you can say goodbye to your social life.

(68) 7th Level - Beat 'Em Up £29.99

A cartoon beat 'em up with great animation, cut scenes and special effects – it looks great, but as for gameplay - forget it.

(85 Recommended) Philips - Interactive Adventure £44.99

One of the best interactive adventures we've seen; good pacing, sharp plot and plenty of variety combine to make it outstanding Crime Patrol & Gamegun

(70) American Laser Games/Mirage - Shoot 'Em Up It won't take you long to exhaust the fun factor of Crime Patrol, but the gun is compatible with some other games and as a bundled package it's really not bad value

(62) Psygnosis - Shoot 'Em Up £39.99 Mediocre 3D blast 'em up with nice smooth polygons, lots to shoot at, but not much more

(88. Recommended) Gremlin Interactive - Racing ETBC Ridge Racer meets Stunt Car Racer as long as you've got a Pentium, of course. Magic Carpet 2 (92: Classic) Electronic Arts - Shoot 'Em Un game is now even better, with new monsters and a new graphical style which includes scary night-time bits - totally addictive.

(90: Classic) Electronic Arts - Sport £44,99 This uses Electronic Art's new 'Virtual Stadium' technology (usedin FIFA Soccer to make it look so flash). One of the nicest-looking sports games we've reviewed for ages, PGA Tour 96 (94: Classic) Electronic Arts - Sport £44.99 New and improved! Now includes two new Championship courses, you can play as or against 14 actual photo-realistic pros. there's a new picture-in-picture view... need we go on?

a new picture-in-picture view... need we go on The best golf game just got better. Pitali: The Mayan Adventuro (70) Activision – Platform £44.99 Conversion of the ancient Atari vcs platform game, nothing particularly special but still fairly addictive

Primal Rage (82: Recommended) Time Warner Interactive -Reat 'Fm Un 939 99

Jurassic Park for psychopaths - yep, dinosaurs a-plenty, good gameplay and graphics. Should appeal to Mortal Kombat or Street Fighter fans.

Alien Odyssey

(77) Philips - Space Adventure Game £44.99 A sort of cross between Bioforge and Cyberia, with the odd Star Wars reference thrown in;

overall a pretty adventure which plods a bit. Battle Islo 3: Shadow 01 The Emperor (93: Classic) Blue Byte – Strategy £45.99

The third and possibly final instalment of one of the most highly respected strategy games of all time. Certainly worth checking out if you like your strategy futuristic.

Comanche Vs Werewolf (88: Recommended) Novalogic/ US Gold ~ Helicopter Flight Sim £39.99

The sequel takes the original game and chucks in a completely new one for good measure Maybe not the best helicopter flight sim, but there's plenty to recommend it

blown off - bloody excellent. (90. Classic) Sony Interactive - Racing Game £44.99

The PlayStation game where you can smash yourself and others to pieces comes to the PC... Plenty of network options, five different ways to play, superb graphics - need we say more?

FIFA '96

(84: Recommended) Electronic Arts - Sport £44.99 If you already own last year's FIFA and you like it, this is worth buying. But if you want a simple and easy to control system look elsewhere. Mortal Kombat 3 (90: Classic) GT Interactive - Beat 'Em Up £44.99 This is the best two-dimensional beat 'em up you'll find anywhere right now. Make damr sure you enjoy it while it lasts.

(90: Classic) Empire Interactive ~ Naval Sim £44.99 (SU: Gassic) Entpile menacive - wave Sin 244,599
Actually two games in one: a flight sim and a military command sim. In it you pilot a jet fighter in the future - you'll find that once the atmosphere kicks in you're hooked

magoria (50) Sierra - Adventure £49.99

Without doubt a brave effort (spanning seven cost) but sadly the interactive part is a ambitious. It looks good but that's about it

(61) Gametek - Driving Game £39.99 The sequel to Quarantine is nothing to write home about, despite the good graphics. (89. Recommended) VIE - Driving Game £29.99 Stunning looking super speedy arcade racer with six different tracks, six different cars (manual or auto) and three different skill levels. Very arcadey indeed.

(84: Recommended) Ocean - Strategy £34.99 A cross between Lemmings and Connon Fodder Four people can play at once, there's lots of weapons and features, and the levels are gen-erated afresh each time you play - good fun.

(I aft) Theme Park Sim City eat your heart out

Œ (88. Recommended) US Gold - Arcade/Role-Plaving Game £29.99

Witchoven is packed with lots of spells and potions to play with, the usual network! modem options, triggers and traps, impressive graphical effects and if you're looking for gore you've found it. Sick, twisted and violent we like it.

(92: Classic) Gremlin Interactive - Sport £TBC Ranking alongside Command & Conquer as the office favourite at the moment, this is currently the best footie game on the PC thanks to excellent gameplay and a fantastic 3D polygonised pitch arrangement - sorr FIFA and Sensi, but you'll have to step asid

(78) Mindscape - Role-Playing Game £44.99 If you've already got a copy of Ultima VII and fancy something similar in style, Entomorph i worth a look. It's got a fairly engrossing storyline, although the presentation is somewhat lacklustre

(65) Philips Media - Flight Sim £39 99

There's very little to say about this game as there's actually very little to it - don't expect it to keep you rivetted to the screen; even what little scenery there is is dull

(85. Recommended) MicroProse - Racing £44.99 One of the most imaginative management simulations around - certainly the best Grand Prix one available, but then it's the only one

th The Eves Of The Monster

(79) Interplay - Adventure £44,99 Starring Tim Curry, this is an excellent gothic adventure. The puzzles are challenging, the storyline is cleverly structured, the visuals are sumptuous, but sadly it's hampered by a dodgy interface which makes it difficult to navigate your way through the locations

(90: Classic) Papyrus/Virgin - Racing £34.99 Polygontastic with absolutely glorious SVG graphics, if you already own IndyCar 1, hold out for FIGP2 instead But if you don't, buy this one. Oh, but if we're really honest here you ought to try to afford FIGP2 as well

(50) Vic Tokai/Virgin - Strategic Shoot 'Em Up £34.99

Is this yet another Doom clone? It basically involves loads of shooting everything you see from a 3D perspective. A great idea on paper, but it's let down by poor graphics and voiceovers (even with the dubious talents of Danı Behri - you may well prefer Hexen

(77) 21st Century Entertainment - Pinball £44.99 For some reason there seems to be more pinball and footie games coming out than you could possibly want, and although you've got a choice of table layouts (which you don't really need anyway) it doesn't really offer anything markedly different.

(90: Classic) Empire Interactive - Pinball £34.99 Don't discount this game because it only features one table as it's packed with goodies you can see the table in its entirety or from six different viewpoints, it's realistic (you can nudge the table from either side as well as the bottom), and it's got an a totally stonking soundtrack as well

(90 Classic) LucasArts/VIE - Shoot 'Em Up £49.99 If you can't see what all the fuss about Star ers is about or you didn't like the original Rebei Assault, chances are you won't like this one. On the other hand, if you're a die-hard Empire/Rebel fan and spend your nights re Empire/Rebel Ian and spend your nights re-enacting scenes between Luke Skywalker and Darth Vader, you'll love it Of course solid action, 'real' live action bits, bloody gorgeous graphics and a corking storyline go some way to recommend it as well

nsible World Of Socce

(60) Warner Interactive - Sport £39.99

We waited a long time for this one. It's got some management bits, some nice re cut-scenes and commentary, but it's still not a patch on Actua Soccer

(76) Interplay - Role-Playing Game £44.99

It looks a bit dated (mainly because it's flick screen), but in its favour it has a nice, easy to handle control method, a wide variety of levels to keep you interested and a very thoughtful experience system which allows your character(s) to become more skilled with their weapons the more they use them

(95: Classic) Mindscape - Flight Simulation £44.99 Developed by Russian pilots, this is all about one of the scarrest aircraft ever built. It's no lightweight 'hop in and pole around the sky type product, but unfortunately it's let dov by a lack of network or serial link multi-play facility If you want a comparison it's better than EF2000, MiG29 and Tornado

The Dia (87: Recommended) LucasArts/VIE -- Adventure £44.99 Another offering touched by the hand of Spielberg. It's a proper adventure with a proper story, a cut above your usual sci-fi adventure stuff And it's got great music (80: Recommended) Virgin Interactive - Pinball £TBC You get six tables to choose from (including Monster, Funfair, Gangster, Sci-Fi, Myst and Majik). It doesn't have the depth of the single table in The Web, but it's good all the same.

(90: Classic) GT Interactive - Various £29 99 Worth buying for an arcade-perfect version of Defender alone, this '80s compilation also includes Robotron 2084, Stargate Defender 2, Joust Bubbles and Smistar. The graphics obviously aren't too hot given the age of the titles, but don't hold that against it

(78) Sony Interactive - Racing £44.99

Winging its way directly from the PlayStation this game of anti-gravity racing with floating cars seems to have lost something in the conversion; play it on anything other than a Pentium and you can kiss the PC version's smoothness and graphical details goodbye Top marks for the brilliant soundtrack though

Issue 35 - February 1996

(84. Recommended) Empire Interactive - Wargame £40 (T8C) One for the serious strategy heads among y

- hex-wargaming finally gets updated for the '90s (NB You'll need Windows 95 to play it) is and Butt-bead

(87: Recommended) Viscom New Media Point-and-click Adventure £39.99

Fans of the gruesome twosome will love this game (but avoid it if you're not as it's unlikely to appeal). Plenty of puzzle solving and a hilarious script - it's like being in control of your very own Beavis and Butt-head episode

(65) Electronic Arts - Pinball Game £39.99

So what did our reviewer make of the 'proper version of Epic Pinball? He had one word for it "Aaaarrrggghh!" If you're after a top quality pinball game, buy Pro Pinball. The Web instead est For Fame (80: Recommended) (BM - Music RPG £49.95 Air guitar rules! Pick up the plastic plectrum and join Aerosmith for a riff extravaganza as you try to make it from unknown musician to mega rock 'n' roll star - 1f you succeed you get to play with the band themselves!

(85: Recommended) VIE- Strategic Shoot 'Em Up £39.99 The third title in the Terminator series, this has pienty of action and atmosphere, as well as one of the best 3D engines around.

(67) Trilobyte/VIE - Adventure/Puzzle Game £TBC The sequel to The 7th Guest has been a long time coming - unfortunately it wasn't really worth the wait, It's not really that different either, apart from the addition of a 'treasure hunt' challenge. But then if you really, really like puzzles you may find that this game is pretty playable.

(78) Funsoft UK - Shoot 'Em Up £39.99 A pre-rendered blastathon which is a bit like Rebel Assault, only without the good bits

(89: Recommended) MicroProse - Strategy Wargame

Strategy, action and lots of futuristic stuff, a sort of Command & Conquer meets Transport Tycoon It's slower C&C, but addictive once you've got to grips with all the options.

(89 Recommended) Sega/Datrontech - Beat 'Em Up Evaries, bundled with Diamond Edge graphics card Bloody stunning visuals with excellent detail on the players - but in the gameplay stakes it doesn't quite match up to Mortal Kombat 3 or StreetFighter II Turbo

(71) MicroProse - Arcade Racing Game ETBC MicroProse have cleverly applied the word 'virtual' to the title - but don't ask why, 'cos the karts don't handle like karts and the hires graphics are jerk-tastic.

(58) Capstone/US Gold - Shoot 'Em Up £39.99 What a pity, as this is just a Doom clone, and we reckon you could probably quite happily live without it... (Sorry Will) Wing Commander IV

nended) Origin/Electronic Arts - Space Combat Sim £TBC

The filmed sequences apparently cost of eight million dollars - and it shows, as they really are very impressive. Unfortunately though, despite a genuinely interesting plot, a strong storyline and the fact that Wing Commander IV is the most cinematic gaming experience you'll find, the gameplay's seriously lacking. You'll also need a mighty meaty PC to play it on.

Issue 36 - March 1996

(70) Domark - Space Shoot Fm Un £39.99

Don't even consider this one unless your PC's got a serious amount of spare hard disk space - our reviewer found that it needed 20MB just to have the menu running at optimum perfor-mancel it's all a bit of a shame really, as this could have been an entertaining variation on the Wing Commander /Elite genre: it's got loads of ground-based missions, various different characters, some fairly complex mission objectives, SVGA spaceships, alien monsties, a big plot twist... but it's also got bland scenery and a pretty disappointing frame rate. To sum up, it's Wing Commander on the rocks.

(90 Classic) MicroProse - Strategy £44.99 This is basically an enhanced version of the first game, but the combat's been tightened up and plenty of new units and advances have been added, as well as 'hit points' hard fans of the original will find that there's still a lot to learn. Of course the biggest difference is that Civilization 2 is completely 3D - although moving up a perspective can make things cluttered and sometimes hard to follow at times, especially if you use the option to have multiple windows open at once. (NB Windows 95 or 3.1 with WinG required.) Firestorm: Thunderhawk 2

(60) Core Design - Helicopter Sım ETBC The Sega cp helicopter blaster gets updated for the PC - although we're not really sure why they bothered. Although its got arcade style controls it's even less realistic than mosi games of its type, and it's totally spoilt by a haphazard viewpoint - one minute the sky's empty, the next you've got something right in front of you Even worse, targets that you lock onto can vanish from sight as you fire This means you end up shooting from a stationary position, making you more vulnerable to attack and, basically, ruining the game

mula One Grand Prix 2

(95: Classic) MicroProse - Racing £44.99 Our reviewer called this an absolute masterpiece - even menu screens, sub menus, pre race options and set-up screens can keep you happily occupied for ages. If you want the options and textures in their full glory you'll need a Pentium, but even in low-res it looks great. The attention to detail is amazing thanks to Geoff Crammond's perfectionism.

and the physics of the game engine are outstanding - give up your social life now! Police Quest: SWAT

(83: Recommended) Sierra – Adventure £49.99 Daryl Gates makes a welcome return with what has to be the best game in the Police Quest series It's a different and enjoyable twist on the traditional adventure game - the only thing holding it back from a classic rating is a lack of compatibility with a light gun

(76) UbiSoft - Platform Game £TBC

From the Sony PlayStation come cutesy Disney-esque sprites, silky smooth parallax scrolling and colourful backgrounds with 68 levels, however, there aren't any that clever puzzles or particularly taxing levels, just nice graphics and a learning curve that veers from easy-peasy to annoying. Sorry Rayman, but despite the good presentation, you're ultimately a bit limited and pretty linear. The Beast Within: Gabriel Knight 2

(88: Recommended) Sierra - Adventure Game £44.99

Admittedly The Beast Within isn't perhaps the most difficult game you'll ever play, but as an interactive movie it's brilliant. The acting is great, the FMV scenes contribute beautifully to the atmosphere and the plot gets increasingly complex and engrossing. Excellent! Time Gate

(84: Recommended) Infogrames - Arcade Adventure 944.99

From the team that brought us Alone In The Dark comes something that looks like ecm... Alone In The Dark, but set back in the days of the Knights Templar However, there are annoying inconsistencies, downright infuriating puzzles, items that are impossible to pick up, and it's easy to miss things, on top of that you'll find yourself saving furiously because you keep getting brutally killed when you least expect it. If you like AITD, you'll like this as it's almost exactly the same - which is - which is why we haven't given it a higher score. Warcraft 2: Tides 0f Darkness

(82 Recommended) Zablac - Strategy £44 99 Despite a dodgy Ai Warrraft 2 is very addictive Despite a Godgy Al Warraft 2 is very addictive and enjoyable – and it's even better still if you can take advantage of the multi-player option and play over a network. All in all, a definite 'must-buy' for anyone who liked the original

Issue 37 - April 1996

(83: Recommended) SSI/Mindscape - Waroame €44.99

The follow-up to the highly successful Panzer General Not much different, although the interface has been enhanced and thanks to Windows you can have any resolution you like. The ground scale is a bit haphazard and varies too much from scenario to scenario. but on the whole Allted General should find favour not only with wargamers but with casual wargamers as well. Simplistic yes, but there's far more to this game than most of its genre. (NB: Windows 95 required.)
Battleground Gettysburg

(87 Recommended) Empire Interactive - Strategy Wargame £39.99

The second in the Battleground series has an excellent feel for the Gettysburg battles (1-3 July 1863). OutckTime movies really are a visual treat, the sound effects are excellent, and if you get stuck there's a comprehensive manual and a Quick Start guide Gettysburg is well-produced and highly playable – hex-head wargamers will love it. But, you'll need 130MB hard disk space for full installation, or 60MB otherwise (NB: Windows 95 required )

(87: Recommended) Domark - Racing Game

This is rather like a first-person perspective Micro Machines. It's brilliant fun, with 24 huge courses (including Mars, Venus, Moon and water) and there are loads of vehicles to choo from (snow ploughs, big foot monster trucks, Florida 'swampmaster' semi-amphibious propellor boat things...). You can even recreate The Italian Job bombing round Italy in # Mini!

(68) Sega - Beat 'Em Up £29.99

Seriously tedious beat 'em up from Sega's newly-founded PC team in which you take on the role of a cartoonist trapped inside a comic book. Yawn, snore, etc.

cent 2 (90: Classic) Interplay - 3D Shoot Em Up

Hardened Descent players will find adequate new perils to test them, but the game's wellpaced enough for newbies. There are new weapons, monsties and great sound effects plus 'Capture The Flag' team games where you can take sides and co-ordinate tactics to overcome your rivals. Overall it's a fun, involving and addictive game. If you loved the original, you'll be totally besotted with this one

(55) Seoa - Arcade £29 99 The Mega Drive game from a few years ago. Unfortunately even the pretty animation can't save it from being totally boring. Nextl

Extr (70) Psygnosis – Sport £29.99

The PlayStation 'trendy sports' game involving mountain bikes, skateboards, in-line skates and street luges, but the PSX version has excellent graphics and the animation is much, much better - it's too slow on a 2133 and even with the detail switched down it plods along, thus destroying any enjoyment factor it might have had lan Botham International Cricket

(78) Beam Software - Sport £34.99 Surprisingly good simulation of one of the world's dullest sports. It's not as playable as the SNES version and has embarrassingly cheap and tacky FMV footage - essentially though it's playable and a good laugh

(85: Recommended) Electronic Arts/EA Sports -

It's haskethall's turn for FA's Virtual stadium treatment, which means four different angles for each camera. It's fast, with intuitive con-trols, reasonably well-animated player sprites as well as being playable in both one- and two-player modes. The in-game graphics are a bit muted and it can be hard to follow the ball when the game gets crowded but it's very playable all the same. There are three level of difficulty and an option to play exhibition games or a full game season, plus arcade, simulation and custom modes

rection: Rise 2

(73) Acclaim/Mirage - Beat 'Em Up £44.99 Far better than the original, but a long way from being a classic. It borrows from other established beat 'em ups: it's got Street Fighter's projectile weapons, Martal Kambat's death moves and the super-combo moves of Nintendo's Killer Instinct. It appears to have everything moves, hordes of characters and secret warriors, bonus levels - but it doesn't have the same addictive gameplay. When you kick and punch the blows don't 'connect', and what's the point of a beat 'em up where y don't feel that you're inflicting any grief?

(85: Recommended) Atari - Arcade £29.99

Atari's 15-year old game revamped with a kicking techno track. You have to defend your tunnel by shooting at the enemy craft trying to invade your space - but don't be deceived by the simplicity of it, it's not as easy as it sounds Hours and hours of classic arcade fun

(34) Sega - Flight Simulation

Repetitive gameplay, dodgy graphics, Ughl

(92: Classic) MicroProse - Flight Simulation £TBC Excellent, apart from dodgy misleading view and a frame rate in hi-res which is only just cceptable on a P133 MicroProse have p off what everyone else has been trying to do. which is to add a cinematic storyline to a flight sim. These bits blend together without being overlong, so that no momentum is lost. Atmosphere, with a capital 'A'.

(73) Mindscape - Strategy Wargame ETBC

Addictive, challenging real-time strategy with an interesting setting and strong plot. Once you're hooked you'll come back for more even though it really is much too hard, the control system is too fiddly and chance plays too much of a role. (NB: Windows 95 required.)

ne 38 - May 1996

(92. Classic) Electronic Arts - Flight Simulation €44.99

The US Navy Fighters engine gets seriously spruced up and then introduced to a large number of 'conceptual' aircraft. The plane's smooth flying is brilliant and the differences between the aircraft are more than noticeable. This is seriously good stuff for the propeller heads among you C&C: The Covert Operations

(84: Recommended) Virgin - Strategy £14.99

Arghi Spooge Spooge.

If you've enjoyed fighting your way through Command & Conquer you can carry on - the mission disc is here! It's a must-have for any C&C fan, but be warned that it's bloody hard!

Metaltech Earthsiege 2 (90: Classic) Sierra – 3D Shoot 'Em Up £44.99 Earthslege is widely regarded as the best of all the big robot games - and the good news is that the sequel has better graphics, better sound effects and loads of new weapons. (NB Windows 95 required.)

(82: Recommended) SCI - Adventure 944.99 More point-and-click fun, but this time with stereotypical gay hairdressers and women with huge boobs. It's quite funny at times.

(90: Classic) Gremlin Interactive - Adventure £TBC Gremlin's ambitious and superb 3D point-and click adventure proves that you can still muck around with genres and come up with some-thing new. It's not quite as funny as the likes of Sam and Max or Discworld, but it's certainly ell worth having a look at Woosnams out there, test your swing with the greatest golf game in existence. It gets de Yanked and tweaked a bit and is ano classic from EA Sports.

Speed Haste (79) Electronic Arts - Racing £29.99

Imagine a cross between Virtua Racing and Daytona USA that only costs thirty quid and doesn't look quite as good.

(91: Classic) Activision - Adventure £49.99

Activision have surprised us all with this one It's basically a 'spy simulator', and if you've ever fancied getting your grubby mits on spy satellites, decoding routines, image analysers and infra-red goggles, now's your chance. This has loads of FMV, loads of puzzles and has some of the most original features we've s for a long time. (NB: Windows 95 required )

(70) Electronic Arts - Shoot 'Em Up ETBC Nice graphics, traditional controls, but what happened to the gameplay? And er... this looks like Stramble, but with much prettier graphics
Virtual Snooker

(60) Interplay - Sport £34.99
A year after Virtual Pool, we get the same game, except that this time around it's with snooker balls and loads and bloody loads of FMV of Steve 'intensely dull' Davis. A complete video of a 147 break, anyone? No?

Assault Rigs

(78) Psygnosis - 30 Shoot 'Em Up £34.99 Direct from the PlayStation, this is basically a 3D platform game in a tank: there are various is to collect, complicated level layouts and minor puzzles. The controls are a little too complicated but it plays well and is action-packed at times. There's also a network option for up to eight people Well worth a look

(68) Psygnosis - Adventure/Puzzle Game £39.99 Although COTS is set in the time of King Arthur, you take on the lesser role of Gawain The storyline doesn't live up to the potential of the subject matter and although there are some well-crafted puzzies, they don't fit into the gameplay very well. It looks good but it's

(75) Interplay - Strategy £TBC The Yanks loved it, but we found it slow, cumbersome and lacking in excitement. Star Trek: Deep Space 9 - Harbinger

(52) Viacom - Adventure £39.99

Unlike A Final Unity, this one doesn't quite reach warp speed. It's not as interactive as it should be - even die-hard Trekkers will fail to be swayed by it. (NB: Windows 95 required.)

(92: Classic) SSI/Mindscape - Strategy Wargame

The third in the Ceneral series uses the same basic combat and movement engine as Panzei General and Allied General, It's the most exciting strategy wargame of the year so far. ack

(86: Recommended) Sierra – Submarine Sim £39.99
Ultra-complex but ultimately rewarding – newbies might find it a bit hard though. (NB: Windows 95 required.)

(60) Sierra - Flight Sim £39.99

The follow-up to A10 Tank Killer - it looks amazing, but the fact that you're constrained to a very small geographic area, the game map is cluttered and unhelpful and the whole thing suffers from extreme jerk-o-vision makes it bloody annoying.

(NR: Windows 95 required.)
TNN Bass Tournament

(80: Recommended) Electronic Arts - Fishing Sin £39 99

It's good, but not quite as good as Trophy Bass as it's more about amassing money than actually reeling the buggers in.

(90: Classic) Virgin Interactive - 3D Shoot 'Em Up £39.99

Another robot title, this time from the people who brought you System Shock and Flight Unlimited. The graphics and sound effects could be better but that aside it's very enjoyable, fast-moving and atmospheric

(65) MicroProse - Hacing Game £29 99 It sounds promising but fails to deliver the gameplay goods. It's slow even on a P75 and lack of control adds to the frustration Trophy Bass

(85: Recommended) Sierra - Fishing Sim £39.99 Near perfect, especially as you get to go fishing at any time of year with all the comforts of home Smartl

(65) Activision - Adventure/Puzzle Game £44.99

Our Chris loved the last game in the series Return To Zork, but was disappointed with this one. The music's very atmospheric and the graphics are absolutely stunning but you er come across any characters to interact with, which makes wandering about solving puzzle after puzzle tedious and boring. How ever, if you're a fan of Myst and The 11th Hou it's quite likely that Nemesis will appeal. (NB. Windows 95 required )

(88: Recommended) Virgin/LucasArts - God Sim £44.99 This 'concept' god sim shapes up well against the mevitable comparisons to Sim City and Civilization, except here you do actually play God, sending lost souls to either Heaven or Hell and looking after their needs by building appropriate 'zones'. Long-term playability. AH-64D Longbow (90: Classic) Electronic Arts – Helicopter Flight

Simulation 944.99

Longhow is justifiably a classic and will appeal most to fans of US Navy Fighters and Top Gun (prop-heads skip to Hind below). It seems to have been designed first and foremost as a game, rather than sticking to realism à la Hind, it's pretty, with superb music and a gorgeous interface - but there's no network play and it requires 97MB hard disk space ie Arena To (83: Recommended) FunSoft - Beat 'Em Up £34.99 Warning - this PSX conversion is processor hungry! True to the original, this is more of a sword and sorcery beat 'em up as opposed to pure fisticuffs - even the 'unarmed' combatants seem to carry the most alarming weapons; a bit of simple hand-to-hand violence wouldn't go amiss. It's got serious competition in the form of Tekken and Virtua Fighter although it doesn't require a 3D accelerator card.

(93: Classic) US Gold - Shoot 'Em Up £44.99 Yup, Duke is a Doom clone but it's more inventive and more entertaining. It's also a bloody good stopgap while we're waiting for the mighty Quake. Duke himself is blessed with a great sense of humour, there are new weapons and enemies, a level designer and the facility to convert any Doom wan into a Duke map. Excellent value for money!

(90: Classic) Philips Media - Arcade £29.99 Don't knock it 'til you've tried it - okay, so it's about clockwork toys battling for supremacy but it's surprisingly addictive nonetheless. (NB: Windows 95 required.)

(90: Classic) Digital Integration - Flight Sim £44.99 Propeller heads and fans of SU-27 and Tornado will lurve this one. The emphasis is on hyper realism rather than presentation, so it runs great on low spec machines Newbies be warned - it's so bloody hard you might be better off with Longhow. It scores over Longbow in that it has loads of multi-play options (direct serial link, two-player over a modem or eight on a network). Prop-heads persevere -it's well worth taking time to master it.

Silent Hunt

(90: Classic) SSI/Mindscape - Submarine Sim £TBC This does what it sets out to do, and does it perfectly. It's hard to fault - it's got superlative atmosphere and graphics, loads of cat and mouse stuff, explosions, big splashes, creaking hulls, depth charge attacks, leaking engine rooms – the wwa works, in fact! Space Hulk: Vengeance Of The Blood Angels

(90: Classic) Electronic Arts - Strategic Shoot 'Em Up 249.99

It's so tough it just about screams "Come on if you think you're 'ard enough!" The tense foreboding atmosphere and new graphics. sounds and 3D engine combine to make sure this offers a long-term challenge to those brave enough to accept it

(81: Recommended) Strategic Plus Software -

Strategy Wargame £44.99
Don't be fooled by the basic graphics, TacOps is a high quality real-time game - with no hexes! Plenty of excitement and endless tactical possibilities make this a must-have. Includes network and play by mail/e-mail options.

en 2 (72) US Gold - 3D Shoot 'Em Up £29.99

Despite having all the elements of quality gaming (superb graphics, spooky sound, fast hectic action and loads of atmosphere) this is more like an add-on disk for the original, and doesn't quite do enough to better its rivals. 2

Yet again the Duke vs Quake war continues to rage, but for a nice change we've also had a few comments saying how good some bits of the mag are. Cool. That sort of behaviour will indeed get you absolutely everywhere.

FF2000 PROBLEMS

I don't know if you are aware of all the fuss going on about EF2000 patches, but I thought you might want to re-visit the game. I bought it after reading your review, and as usual, you were dead right - it's a superb sim. However, there were some bugs etc, but DID have since released two patches to fix them and they've improved the sim substantially.

The 'fuss' is because the patches have introduced some new bugs (I), although they do noticeably improve the game – which is why I thought that maybe you would consider reviewing it again.

Also, maybe you would consider putting the patch on your cover CD—it's too big for a floppy, and the many people without CompuServe or Net access will still be playing the (very inferior) original version.

David Tallon 100342.3150@compuserve.com

We're aware that there are some problems with the patches, and no one seems to have an exact explanation for what's going on. Having said this though, it's nice to see that some of the sillier bugs have been sorted out. Hooray for patch disks though - virtually everything we've seen recently has somehow managed to fix one thing at the expense of something else.

DUKE VS QUAKE SNORATHON

After recently getting the Duke Nukem 3D demo, I saw in the mag that there was an argument going on between Duke and Quake. As I hadn't played Quake I thought nothing of it. However, having now bought Duke Nukem 3D and downloaded the Quake demo I think it's safe to say that Quake is pure shit compared to Duke Nukem 3D. Granted the Quake demo has no monsters, but after using the hack on last month's CD to get them it's just rubbish! I mean, Pipe Bomb vs Nail Gun! RPG vs Blow Pipe lookalike! And why the hell do you have a shotgun while the enemy has swords and chainsaws? Plus the environment in Duke is much better than Mediaeval Shit I'm not saying that Quake is bad or anything, but compared to Duke - no chance.

106045.2750@compuserve.com

For god's sake, just when are people going to let up on this bloody Quake vs Dulke routine? Every month we say, "Es, but... etc, etc." Duke 3D is quite clearly a superb game. It's fab and as a result it deservedly got 39%. Doom is also a fab game, as is Hexen and Witchaven and Doom 2 and lots of others... they're all similar and they're all similar and they're all similar and they all very good. Quake is going to be a bit different, and to be honest at this point no one really has an idea what the final game is going to be like. Can people please reserve judgement on Quake until they've played the shareware version because I'm getting extremely pissed off with everyone being so bloody tedious.

What I would like to invite people to do though is to write to us the second they play the shareware game. This is something that we really want a lot of reader comment on. It's without a doubt the most eagerly awaited FC game ever, and as a result it would be very interesting to have an idea of what people think of it. Don't worry... Quake is nearly with us.

To say that we're getting a bit tired of it would be something of an understatement.

WHINGE CORNER

In your June issue of PC Zone you gave the budget release of Whacky Wheels a pants rating of 15%.

How wrong you are... admittedly the game is not £25+ material, but in two-player mode it's excellent fun and at £9,95 it's a bargain. And it's not just the bog standard version either - it's the full upgraded version. I think a score of 575% with the comment 'Good old-

As I think your mag is the best on the market, I subscribed. However, it seems that recently you lot and your publishers have gone downhill. For statters, the May issue was in the shops in the last week of MARCH... does this mean I'll be getting the December Christmas issue in October???

Also, some of the 90%+ recommended games that you've reviewed recently have been either shit or pants. For example, Top Gun - what a pile of crap, even on a mate's 16MB P120. There was also total screen corruption when you did tricks like looping the loop etc...

Big Red Racing – yet another one.
Not as bad as Top Gun, but still shit. I actually bought it (well, swapped in the swap shop anyway)... It was good for all of half an hour. I took it back to the shop the next day and got credit less £2.50 for the privilege of taking it home. I bet you're sick of me moaning by now as I've e-mailed you several times; I don't know if you're receiving these, but hey it's always good to have a bit of a whinge.

Whacky Wheels? Are you completely deranged??? It's pants. As for your comments about Top Gun, I rather get the impression that either a) you are playing a completely different game, or b) your mate's P120 is — quite frankly — poo. A machine with a spec such as that you describe should make the game fly like shit off a shovel, so I suggest that you check out your pal's system set-up and make sure everything is configured properly. Failing that, I would check out the graphics card... sounds to me like something is very wrong somewhere.

As for Big Red, well it looks like we're going to have to agree to disagree on that one. We felt that it had the same sort of appeal as Micro Machines but in 3D – that was our opinion though, and if you think it's not up to it then fair enough.

Anyway... at least you got one bit right.
I am sick of you moaning.

UP THE REVOLUTION

REVOLUTION! I've had just about enough of softies charging huge sums of money for bugged games, only to bring out 'upgraded' versions (slightly fewer bugs, to you and I), so let's send Culky round in his Tank... Liberal use of his Chin Pistons<sup>TM</sup> should sort all those buggers out and assure us of cheap upgrades to bug-free software...

We can take those bastards

stuart@reverend.demon.co.uk

Er... ves. Probably. Or something.

REVIEWING SYSTEM

Just a quickie – I think that your new game review scoring system is great. At last, you can readily see if a particular game is power hungry, low-spec friendly and so on. At this rate I might even renew my subscription!

Oh, and for what it's worth, I'd just like to say that I love the cartoon strip, think that Culky wants a foot up his arse and that someone should break both pairs of Mr Cursor's glasses.

Craig D Gilliver qilliverc.bssol@ems.rail.co.uk

Glad you like our new system. The new icons are part of a new arrangement that we're introducing over the coming months. Basically, what we're aiming to do is make sure that the reviews are as accessible and as reader friendly as possible. If this is generally accepted as helpful and as having worked then we're happy. If anyone has any further ideas or comments, obviously we're keen to hear them. Bloody hell. That was serous wasn't it?

SOD OFF BARRY

Who the fuck is Barry Biro, and what the hell are you doing printing drivel from such a complete and utter twat? Who the hell does he think he is?

Is he serious, or is it just an attempt at wacky 'humour' in PC Zone? Well, whoever he is, just tell him to fuck off, will you?

Steve Robson, London W11

Er... Okay. Z

Barry's disco nightmare

I'M NOT COING TO TALK ABOUT ABMES THIS MORTH AS I'VE BEEN far too busy working on yet another of my projects. You all know that I'm more than a little bit partial to all things game-wise, but Davison isn't the only one round here with musical aspirations. I too am a music man – a Slave to the Rhythm Arch-Mage of the Arpeagio.

Over the past few weeks, rather than spending all my time down at 'The Riders of Rohan' playing Deathmatch Quake, yours truly has been happily locked in a rehearsal room with Swifty and the guys, composing art and generally 'giving it some' on vox!

To illustrate my tasles you could do no better than checking out my record collection. If you care to rifle through it you'll find a diversity of talent with those popular acts everybody loves like Barclay James Harvest, Camel and early Uriah Heep, next to much more obscure stuff like Jethro Tull, Hawkwind and Wishbone Ash (at least you would if it wasn't all catalogued alphabetically).

I like to think that there's something for everyone in there: even classic pop finds a place in the form of Van Der Graaf Generator and Yes (the latter of which are featured heavily). It can cater for the more contemporary taste with Rush and Boston, while there are certainly no shortage of surprises; would you believe you'll even find Emerson, Lake & Palmer, The Nice, and King Crimson if you look hard enough?

The band really is a fine musical four-piece. Swifty is a classically trained planist who excels on dual keyboards; Kentigan is a virtuoso guitarist capable of a note-perfect rendition of the "difficult" third solo in Suttans Of Swing, Tom's a rock solid tub-thumper who could even teach

Neal Peart a thing or two, while my vocal-style has been described as a cross - or fusion - between Jimmy Page and The Edge.

As I've already said, we've been jamming round at Swifty's flat for many moons now and I don't mind saying we've come up with some killer material. Our axiom is that with enough free-form and improv you will stumble upon a masterpiece (cf. Tarkus by Emerson Lake and Palmer). Admittedly, after a few hours jamming, it always — to paraphrase the great Jon Anderson — "gets a bit like a soul-show" (ref. intro to Don't Kill The Whale side 3 track 1 YesShows), so we decided to cut through the muso bullshit and start laying down some tracks.

Our focal point will be a gig at our mate's birthday party on Thursday week, so we've created a short set of four songs which will highlight our depth and diversity.

Kicking off with a moody rock ballad with a mediaeval feel called Gandalf and Galadrid (taking its lytical inspiration from Lord Of The Billings) we segue into Elric Wore his Sword which is a no-nonsense, prog-rocker based on the work of Michael Moorcock. Thirdly, after hardly pausing to let the crowd age their breath, we reach an artistic high with Listen To The Wisdom Of Guynan (which is an ode to everyone's favourite NextGen character) before climacing with a cover of it Bites criminally undersated Calling AlT The Horoes.

In fact the only slight problem has been finding a suitable name, a serious moot-point and a source of mucho disagreement. At first we thought we could call ourselves after a song or album as a tribute to one of our heroes: after all, Mötörhead got their name from a track by Hawkwind. The problem was that our favourite record turned out to be The Myths and Legends of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table by Rick Wakeman and that's a bit of a mouthful.

Culky Says...

Dear England, Alright? Colin here isn't it.

Oriortunately, due to an error of the local county court, accentuated by an unbribable judge and jury, old Culaus is triting to you on paper I managed to blag off of another inmate, inside another inmate, names a wage out of another inmate, names a grathuret nick.

I got 30 days for takin' and drivin' away, and it weren't me what done it nither, but old Colin don't never grass of the mates, and especially idn't grass on Timothy watts, 15 Eigin Creucent, London Wil, se I ain't no 'bean-spiller', so they barged me up instead isn't it. Culay carried the can.

Anyay, a representative from FC Zone applied for a visiting order to make sure old Colin got his copy for this issue does in time. John, the editor and that, come down to check up on old Chily doesn't it. He come into the visiting room and that, and I goose in "GEEZ!... OKEZ!... OKER!... OKER IN THE STATE OF THE STA

EII, SUMMER'S HERE AGAIN, and old Cullk's got a few tips on how to avoid a few red faces at the beach and that, especially down. Clacton-on-Sea like where I go for mi hols. When you're on the beach and stripped down to the

'cack' level, it really separates the men from the boys. But don't worry if your pectils are a bit pincy or your biceps are a bit beeny, Culk'll have you mini-muscles sorted in ten minutes with an instant muscle-gain kit that costs less than £4.69! No long hours in the gym, no heavy weights to lift, just a few minutes down the scrapyard, and then on down to the local B&Q. In an instant you could look like this...

(a a)

All you need is the following:

1) Two old car tyre inner tubes
(scrapyards give them away)

2) Heavy duty sticky tape
(from your mum)

3) Small tin of pink gloss paint

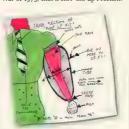

Cut the car inner tubes into arm length sections, remembering to include the valve bit, slide one on each arm, and use the sticky tape to seal one end tightly to your wrist, and the other to your shoulder (should take approx 5 mins).

(R&O)

Next, get down the local garage where they got air and that, for cars, and pump up your new 'muscles' to about 25 psi – any more and they'll burst and you'll look silly.

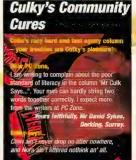

Lastly, just splash a bit of pink gloss on them and off you go... straight down to the beach to kick sand in other blokes' faces, in front of their birds, again and again and again. Women will oggle as your muscles ripple in the sun. girls will fall over themselves as you flex those pumpy pects! Their boyfriends will turn white with fear as you give 'em the old... "Yeah?...come on then? ...you reckon on it is it?"

Just remember not to stub your fag butts on them though...you'll leybloe! And another caution...you'll have to explain to them why your muscles get bigger as the air inside them expands under the hot sun, but tell them that you actually exercise when you lie down, using a weith breathing method. Tell them it's a secret internal marshal art technique that you learnt in the Congo War of 1973, that'll sort'em up I reckon.

THE CLEAR ADVANTAGE ...additional tips from the top of Culky's mind...

You may find yourself up against someone on the beach who uses their cleverness to pull birds, you know, like uses thoughts about physits and

electrickerness and that, from their minds, like what I never do. The sort of women what like clever men don't even care about muscles, no matter how big they are, so old Culky's come up with an old trick so you stand a fairer chance of nobbling them ones an' all..

Follow Mr Brains back to his house, go round the back garden and open a window and sneak a good handful of rotting prawns under his bed. Leave the window slightly open. When he bring them girlies back, they is in for a shock—the stink from them rotting prawns will bring all the local flies in, and he won't be able to get rid of the stench, or the flies, for weeks. Flies will follow him around everywhere, and that bedroom won't smell too pretty an'all! Even clever girls hate the smell of rotting prawns, and they don't take too good to thousands of flies nither! Trust Culky!

NB: Editor's warning and full disclatimer Users of Colin's muscle kit do so at their own risk, Culky is not liable for injury in the event of fist-trouble, explosions or hot rubber stickage, or any injury incurred at their attempted removal.

Next month, a journey into the sharp corners of Culky's mind as he visits the HM prison therapist. Z

MR CURSOR

'LL GET TO THE JOHN KETTLEY STUFF later, but first I want to share a tasty discovery with you. I live in a tower block which has recently had a cockroach population explosion (it's swarming with the bastards). The people on the second floor blame the tenants on the first floor, the third floor tenants blame the second floor. (Below) Ensure your the fourth the third... and on it goes, all the way up to the top. And we, all us twelfth floorers, naturally, blame the eleventh floor scum. Here's proof.

"I kill eighteen roaches

Nigerian neighbour, in the lift. She continued: "It is the Irish below me who are to blame, I am sure of this, I am sure of this!"

I agreed that she may have a point, but added that the weird Spanish bloke next door to them - to my mind - wasn't completely beyond suspicion either.

"Yes." she concurred. "He is very crazy!" And he is. He's totally barking. But he's also 100 per cent innocent. You see what I didn't tell my worried neighbour, for obvious reasons, was that the person responsible for the block's cockroach infestation was standing in the lift with her. Yes - it's me! (My cockroach breeding programme got slightly out of control last summer, and about 70 of the buggers escaped through the air vent in the bathroom after I accidentally knocked one of the containment tanks over.)

But why was I breeding them in the first place? Listen: having watched every episode of Channel Four's Bush Tucker Man, I realised that if a half-starved Australian Bush Beetle constitutes such a good feed, then how about a City Beetle? So, to this end, I visited London

He's afraid of ... John Kettley (but not cockroaches)

Zoo and helped myself to a few exhibits from the insect house. I put 22 aside for procreation purposes, leaving nine for culinary experimentation. It took a while, but this - I eventually discovered - is how to correctly prepare a cockroach for human consumption. (1) Remove and discard the solid wing covering flaps. (2) Slice off the head and arse area. (3) Pull off the legs. (4) Make an incision along the back of what's left and crack it open down the middle, revealing the fleshy insides. (5) Place your opened 'roach under a low grill for two minutes. (6) Artistically present it on a plate (ie put a slice of lemon next to it). (7) Yummy! Use a teaspoon and fingers! It looks like a black olive! And the taste? Well, it's sort of 'acquired', as they say - but then the same could be said about caviar, and that vile cack costs a zillion quid an ounce! (While cockroaches are free.)

John Kettley is a weatherman...

So what does cockroach farming have to do with John Kettley, and is there any connection whatsoever between either of these and computers? Read on...

It just so happened that I was digesting a cockroach when I first noticed how John Kettley tries (whenever possible) to jokingly link the final item on the news into his following weather report. For instance, the last story (on the cockroach digesting day in question) was about pigeons nesting on London tube trains. End 6 O'clock news, and over to John: "Hmm, it looks as if autumn's come home to roost as well," he smirked, pointing at some rain clouds on his map.

A few days later the news petered out with a story on the Harlem Globetrotters. Cut to John: "They're lucky that basketball's an indoor sport," he chuckled, pointing to yet more rain clouds.

Zip forward a week or so. The closing news story is (yawn) a Labour conference in Blackpool. Over to a grinning Kettley: "So the Labour Party are discussing Europe," he chirped. "Well, the people in Brighton are also probably discussing Europe at the moment, seeing as that's where all their rain has just come from."

I could quote these genuine Kettleyisms for hours on end, but I still haven't tied computers into the equation. But expect that to change immediately...

Okay, while eating a cockroach the other evening I decided to write a BASIC programme which would automatically supply Kettley-isms. The idea was that you'd type in the gist of the final story from a news broadcast, the PC would search its database and do some simple word recognition stuff, and then it'd print out a few 'cheeky links'.

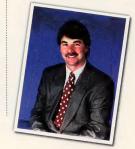

My first computer aided Kettley-ism (seeded with a story about Labour's criticism of last month's Railtrack selloff) came out thus: "They were talking about trains in the >syntax error on line 690 >programme terminated!" Damn and bloody damn again. (Oh, I forgot to mention that I'm not very good at programming.)

Anyway, I happily scoffed another cockroach, fiddled with a couple of subroutines for about half an hour and tried again, using the same news item. Back to John: "Well, I expect the shareholders are very >DO without LOOP >programme terminated!" Piss!

I then spent two whole days going through the entire AI code and data strings with a fine tooth comb. The problem? A missing bloody comma, would you believe. Which brings us to now. This is live (as it were) and I'm virtually certain that the programme's structure is sound, and, that in simple BASIC, I have simulated John Kettley's entire brain! So I'll give it a really heavy news item to chew on. How about a made-up one, eh? Erm, I'm telling it that a gargantuan volcanic eruption has just killed 815,000 people in New Zealand, I'll press 'return', (Click...)

Well, it may be rather hot in New Zealand at the moment, but here in the UK I'm afraid it's >procedure not found >programme terminated!"

Bollocks! I give up. Z
